

Army Sec'y Brucker "In For Duration"

SECRETARY of the Army Wilber M. Brucker, shown above being greeted in Hawaii by Mrs. I. D. White, wife of General White, Army Pacific CinC, has declared that he has "enlisted for the duration."

The Secretary made this remark to spike rumors circulating in Washington that he intended to leave the Pentagon soon after his return next week from a Pacific inspection trip.

THE JOURNAL has learned authoritatively that General White, also rumored to have been considering retirement, plans to remain in active service until required to leave service for statutory reasons.

House-Senate Crossfire Threatens Prompt Action On President's 1 Feb. Pay Equalization Plan

PRESIDENT Eisenhower's plan to equalize military retired pay effective 1 February may get caught in a crossfire on Capitol Hill.

On the eve of the Budget Message 18 January in which the Chief Executive will request funds for the $20.5 million retired pay proposal, there is speculation that the measure could bump smack into a formidable Congressional roadblock.

The Pentagon pay equalization proposal was introduced in the House 7 January by Rep. John F. Baldwin, Jr. (R-Calif.).

He said: "Since this bill (HR 9304) has the approval of both President Eisenhower and the Defense Department, I very much hope that the Armed Services Committee will schedule early hearings upon this and other similar bills so that this legislation can be brought before the House of Representatives as soon as possible."

Representative Baldwin noted that the proposal "will restore the almost undeviating principle in the military pay and retirement system that the pay of a retired member of the uniformed services

THE JOURNAL'S policy of publishing texts of important documents in all the Services is pointed up in this issue.

The new Marine Commandant, General David M. Shoup, has received national news attention for his comments on the swagger stick as being an "optional item of interference," but he had many more important observations to make concerning his plans for the Corps.

Secretary of Defense Gates has told the Joint Chiefs that he wants to know when there are divergences among the members, and has said he intends to meet with the JCS members to discuss problems on which they cannot reach agreement.

"Conflict of private and official interests" is the subject of a comprehensive statement by the Air Force. Its publication comes as the Hébert Subcommittee on Capitol Hill is preparing to release its report concerning retired Service officers in defense industries, which will be reported in detail in next week's issue of THE JOURNAL.

GEN. WHITE WANTS B-70

General Thomas D. White, Air Force Chief of Staff, made it known in a prepared address and in a question-answer session at the National Press Club this week that he intends to tell Congress his convictions concerning the need for the B-70 bomber and for "unified" command of the Nation's strategic striking resources—Page 8.

Hong Kong Leave Is Far East Prize

HONG KONG

THIS sparkling, cosmopolitan British Crown Colony, sitting in the lap of Communist China, is the leave-Mecca of the nearly half a million U. S. Armed Forces personnel and their families in the Pacific Area.

No one knows for sure how many of them get here, but it is a safe bet that the yearly total of U. S. Service folk who spend some leave—and much money—in Hong Kong runs into many thousands.

Hong Kong and its neighbor Kowloon are well run, clean and efficient with excellent hotels and public transportation. English is spoken everywhere. They are picturesque, modern and lively with plenty of entertainment, theaters, night clubs, and fine restaurants. But they are renowned principally for their wide variety of the world's top merchandise—all duty free. Suits, shoes, and shirts can be made to order out of the best material in a day or so and at prices that keep visitors busy buying.

As one U. S. Navy commander puts it: "Hong Kong is one place you can go broke saving money."

The men of the Seventh U. S. Fleet are Hong Kong's best customers. So popular is Hong Kong in the Fleet that VAdm. Frederick N. Kivette, Fleet Commander, says that when the incident rate ashore runs a little higher than usual, all he has to do is to threaten to cut off Hong Kong liberty and the rate drops immediately.

Because of Hong Kong's convenient position near the center of the 3,000-mile patrol line of the Seventh Fleet, it is a convenient stop. Virtually every U. S. ship in the Far East can have liberty there about once every six months.

Many Navy skippers are thoughtful of their Army comrades. When they have room, particularly on such ships as tenders, they will offer to take Army officers and enlisted men when they are due for leave and the ship is due for Hong Kong.

The Air Force, too, finds reason to get into the Hong Kong area at intervals. In fact, the Air Force has contracted with a Hong Kong firm, Jardine, Matheson & Co., Ltd., to provide all U. S. personnel arriving at Kowloon's Kai Tak Airport with transportation to customs and immigration and to and from hotels, and to help them make out their forms, and handle their baggage. This service costs each passenger and crew member only 80 cents.

Because shopping in the hundreds of Hong Kong's stores is the top attraction, the Navy has established a system to help Service people.

The Navy does a great deal of its own buying in Hong Kong, particularly for Navy Exchanges and Ship's Service Stores ashore.

The Navy has made contracts with a large number of firms. Samples of these goods, to a total of some 4,000 items, have been put on display on the third floor of the China Fleet Club, a British Navy installation which works closely with our people.

Authorized visitors may pick out the item they want, the Navy gives them a "Cash Purchase Form," and

Capitol Journal

In advance of grueling questioning he faces before at least five different Congressional committees in the next few weeks, Defense Secretary Gates this week paid an unexpected, unannounced "courtesy call" on Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Armed Services Committee. The Secretary told the surprised staff that, even without an appointment, the House Committee is one place on the Hill where he can always rely on "a warm welcome, sound advice and a good cup of coffee." . . . Despite the furor over the Senate's action in killing Navy-Marine Corps "tombstone" promotions, the predicted "dire results" did not result. Capitol Hill sources have disclosed that of about 240 retirements that resulted, only 75 involved officers who would not otherwise have been re-tired this fiscal year.

Representative Morgan M. Moulder (D-Mo) has introduced legislation (HR 935) creating a supreme JCS Chairman who would command all the Services. The Joint Staff would become "an overall Armed Forces General Staff." . . . The Navy wants authority to transfer the old submarine Flasher (SS249) to the Groton and New London, Conn. Chambers of Commerce for display in a planned memorial museum to submariners.

Authority is being sought to let the Republic of China keep the old destroyer Rodman for five more years. The vessel has been one of the major combatant ships of the Chinese Navy since 1955. Major ships in the fleet include two other destroyers and five destroyer escorts, all on loan from the U. S.

. . . There was flank speed action on the Pentagon's request concerning the Rodman and on the Defense Department proposal to alter criteria for selection of the two top officials of the Bureau of Ships (THE JOURNAL, 9 January). The measures were introduced by Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D-SC) whose subcommittee opened hearings on 12 January and approved both bills.

Space hearings will begin 20 January before the House Committee on Science and Astronautics. Chairman Overton Brooks (D-La), said the Defense Department should "establish an overall integrated missile and space program." . . . Chairman F. Edward Hébert (D-La) of the House Armed Services Investigating Subcommittee, held a press conference 13 January to discuss results of the probe into the employment of retired officers by defense industries. The committee's report and hearings were handed out to reporters at that time but were embargoed for release until 18 January. Full details will be published in THE JOURNAL next week.

Next Week

President Eisenhower's budget for the Armed Forces for the year starting 1 July goes to Capitol Hill next week, and THE JOURNAL issue of 23 January will give comprehensive all-Service coverage to its contents.

An exclusive report on the AF missile and space program will be another feature of next week's issue. Maj. Gen. O. J. Rilland, Commander of the Air Force Ballistic Missile Division (ARDC) at Los Angeles, Calif., has prepared a special article for JOURNAL readers.

$100,000 Life Insurance Policies Proposed For Service Astronauts; Would Be Tax-Free

Free life insurance policies worth $100,000 each have been proposed for Service astronauts.

Legislation (HR 9316) introduced by Representative Emilio Q. Daddario (D-Conn) would require the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Agency to purchase the policies for each of the astronauts "who are training for space flight in the present program of the Administration to orbit a manned space vehicle around the earth."

The insurance would be payable to a beneficiary designated by the astronaut "in the event of his death while participating in training flights, simulated training flights, or in actual flights designed to achieve successful orbit of a manned space vehicle around the earth."

The payments would be disregarded in determining the gross estate of an astronaut under the income tax laws.

Space program officials have indicated concern (THE JOURNAL, 7 November) that highly qualified members of the Armed Forces may be reluctant in the future to volunteer for duties which would make them non-insurable by commercial companies at premiums which they can afford to pay.

THE JOURNAL urged editorially (14 November) that the Defense Department and NASA "should join in asking Congress to vote legislation which would authorize special insurance coverage for families of Service people who volunteer for aircraft test and space missions."

URGENT PROBLEMS RELIABLY SOLVED

Key Army Schools In The U. S. Are Merged In Carib Facility

PANAMA CANAL ZONE

TAKE all the Army schools in the U.S., roll them into one and you will have a large-sized version of the U.S. Army Caribbean School at Ft. Gulick, C. Z.

The School serves as a second "West Point" for Latin American military academy cadets. It is a technical and professional training school for South American officers and enlisted men.

It is also the Command and Staff College for senior Latin American officers.

Recently, it has modified its Command and General Staff, and Command, Regimental and Battalion Course to train Latin American officers in the use of atomic weapons.

Col. Cecil Himes is Commandant. Lt. Col. Phillip M. Judson is Assistant Commandant.

Before WWII, some European nations, notably France, Germany and Italy, provided air, ground and naval missions throughout Central and South America.

After the war, the Latin American Republics, realizing the importance of inter-American solidarity, canceled their contracts with European countries and made arrangements for military missions from the United States. Subsequently, the Latin American nations were invited to send students to the Canal Zone for on-the-job training with U.S. technical and tactical units. From these instances of the benefits to be found in inter-American support arose the concept of the U.S. Army Caribbean School.

A JOURNAL

Founded in 1949 by Maj. Gen. Ray E. Porter, the School originally was designed to meet the needs of both U.S. and Latin American military forces. In the first few years, instructional emphasis was directed towards U.S. officers and enlisted men. Soon, however, this emphasis was changed, because of the Latin American Republics' requests for additional student spaces.

At present, all courses are given in the Spanish language, and the only U.S. students are Spanish-speaking citizens from Puerto Rico.

The courses parallel those offered at various U.S. Army schools in the United States. Latin American students may pursue instruction identical to that given at the Infantry School at Ft. Benning, Ga., the Command and General Staff College at Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., the Engineer School at Ft. Belvoir, Va., the Artillery School at Ft. Sill, Okla., and the Provost Marshal School at Ft. Gordon, Ga.

Lessons at the USARCARIB School are taught from Spanish versions of the textbooks used at these and other major institutions.

Translating is handled by the USARCARIB School's translation department, which prepares in the Spanish language not only instructional material but also field manuals, technical treatises, lesson plans, letters and directives.

Subjects taught at the school are determined by the requests of the nations sending students. Command and general staff, engineer, automotive, small arms repair and military police courses are usually in demand. Many other courses are also offered; these include command and regimental and battalion staff—a field of study similar to that covered in the Associate Advanced Course at Ft. Benning, Ga.—light artillery mechanic, radio operator, radio repair, supply, infantry weapons and infantry tactics.

In addition, the school offers a special 46-week course for senior-year cadets of Latin American military academies.

In most of the school's courses, one hour every day is devoted to the study of the English language.

Students are selected by the cooperating Latin American Republics in coordination with U.S. Army military missions and military attaches.

As of last month, the School has graduated 17,034 students, 9,000 of whom were Latin Americans, ranging in rank from private to general, and representing nearly all the nations in the Americas.

Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Colombia, Costa Rica, El Salvador, Ecuador, Guatemala, Haiti, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama, Paraguay, Peru, Uruguay, Venezuela and the United States have provided the USARCARIB School with students.

L/G Ruffner Tops President's List Of Army General Officer Nominations

L. Gen. Clark L. Ruffner, Third Army Commander at Ft. McPherson, Ga., 57, will succeed Admiral Walter F. Boone, retiring U. S. Representative to the Military Committee and Standing Group of NATO.

President Eisenhower has asked the Senate to approve four-star rank for General Ruffner and simultaneously nominated Maj. Gen. Harry P. Storke, who will be 55 on 8 March, USMA '26, a former Army Chief of Information, to be a lieutenant general as CG of I Corps in Korea.

Maj. Gen. Edward J. O'Neill, who will be 58 on 24 March, USMA '24, was named for three-star rank as successor to retiring Lt. Gen. Blackshear M. Bryan, First Army Commander at Governors Island, N. Y.

The President named eight Army brigadier generals and 19 colonels for promotion.

It is expected that these nominations will fill vacancies occurring through 1 April.

II, 51, who will command the 3d Infantry Division in Europe.

Jungle Warfare Center Tests New Items; Train Troops Of All Services

From first page—

the jungle must hand-carry casualties and supplies long distances over narrow, hemmed-in trails, and load them on trucks and jeeps which can travel only very slowly over tortuous roads.

Radio communications in the jungle are a major problem, the major relates. Light back-pack sets must be operated within line-of-sight of each other, restricting use to ranges of only 100-150 yards in some areas. Heavier radios are employed successfully, but the operating crew must stop, set up their equipment and hand-crank a generator.

Major Dickson and his staff pin high hopes on transistorized radios as the solution.

Navigating through the tropical forest is another problem. The Center staff is researching the possibilities of using low-flying aircraft to keep in touch with parties in the jungle and to guide them.

To combat the heat and humidity, Ma-substitute for the packboard, camouflage dye for web equipment, all-purpose stretch socks, and lightweight uniforms in poplin.

The new snakebite kit is a modified glass tube and length of hose which has drawing power equivalent to mouth suction. The Center currently teaches that mouth suction is the best method of drawing out poison, and that no incision should be made in the area of a snake bite.

Major Dickson says he would like to see a research and development unit established at the JWTC to further advances in both materiel and doctrine for jungle operations.

Although R&D projects attract much interest, the main concern of the Center is to train troops in jungle fighting and survival.

The Center gives a three-week training course for a company at a time.

Special cycles are held each year for an officer class and an NCO group made up of Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine students.

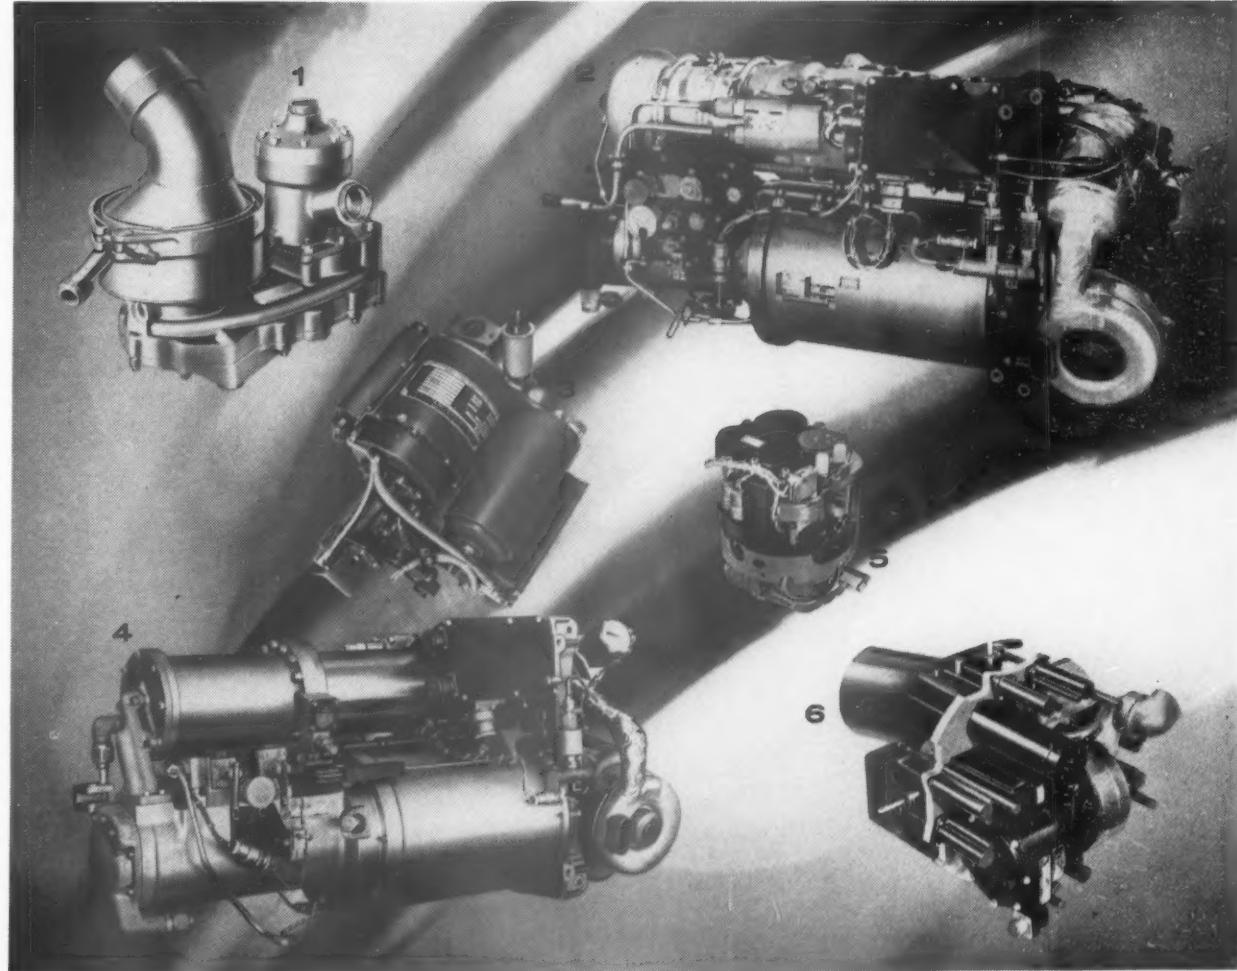

The Center during the past seven years has trained 11 infantry battalions, one artillery battalion, seven infantry rifle companies, one mortar battery, two officers and two NCO classes from the continental U.S., and two classes of Army NCOs from the Canal Zone.

In addition, a tailored two-week course was put on last September for more than 70 officers and men of the 77th Special Forces Group, Airborne, from Ft. Bragg, N. C.

Two companies of the Panama National Guard also went through the jungle course, one each in October and December, to mark the first time that Latin American units have been handled. All instruction was presented in Spanish.

for Dickson has designed and modeled a uniform of fiberglass screen, said to stand up well under rough treatment in the brush, and allow reasonably free ventilation for a sweating soldier.

AiResearch has designed, developed, manufactured and delivered thousands of missile accessory power units. Extremely reliable and lightweight, these various solid and liquid monopropellant APUs are completely self-sustaining within the missile system. Designed to minimum space and weight requirements, they are built to withstand high G loading and severe temperature extremes.

The several units pictured above provide hydraulic, electrical and/or steering surface control depending on the customer's requirement. Delivered horsepower ranges from 1.2 to 35 h.p. over hot gas operating durations from 30 seconds to 20 minutes. Electrical regulation is maintained as closely as $\pm \frac{1}{2}\%$. A significant advance in missile APUs is unit #6 pictured above. This package represents the first integrated hydraulic and electrical power unit providing a steering surface actuation system.

These tailored systems utilize the extensive hardware experience and complete laboratory, test and production facilities of AiResearch needed for quick and efficient quantity production of complex APU systems. AiResearch is the world's largest and most experienced manufacturer of lightweight turbomachinery—the key component of its APU systems. Your inquiries are invited.

Navy Seeks Capitol Help For Career Pay-Off From $150 Million Holloway Program

THE Navy wants Congressional authority to give new life to its multi-million dollar Holloway NROTC program.

In a move which points up the program's major flaw—its failure to produce any significant number of career officers—the Pentagon seeks to plug the escape route by which thousands of NROTC students leave the Navy and Marine Corps as fast as they complete their obligated service.

Since it was launched in 1946, the Holloway Program has subsidized the college education of some 20,000 students at an average cost of about $7500 each—a total of more than $150 million.

The number of graduates who have elected to remain as career officers has ranged from a low of 10% of the first class to a high of about 18%. In the Marine Corps, the retention rate has been about 40%.

These statistics from JOURNAL records were not mentioned in the Navy's request to Congress, but the importance of the problem is underscored by the fact that the new proposal was sent to Capitol Hill over the signature of Defense Secretary Gates.

The Defense Secretary said the Navy, over the past few years, has made administrative efforts to eliminate distinctions between Holloway graduates and graduates of the U. S. Naval Academy. The new proposal will further this objective, he said.

Under present law, Holloway graduates, all of whom are granted Regular commissions, must apply for retention in that status before they complete their required service. Those who do not apply are stripped of their USN rank and placed in the Naval Reserve.

Required service for Holloway graduates is three years for those commissioned through 1960 and four years for those who will be commissioned in 1961 and thereafter.

The new plan would eliminate the "request to stay in" concept, substituting rules which apply to officers commissioned from Annapolis. This means that all Holloway graduates who enter the program after the change goes into effect would have to seek Navy approval to give up their Regular commissions.

By shifting the initiative to the officer, the Navy believes "significantly greater number of high caliber officers would remain as Regular officers," Secretary Gates said.

When the original law was enacted in 1946, Secretary Gates said "it was thought that the number of applicants for a permanent career would far exceed the number of vacancies." For that reason, the "request to stay in" concept was "adopted as a means of control."

Secretary Gates told Congress this concept has proved "to be not only unnecessary, but a barrier" between Holloway and Naval Academy graduates. The Holloway graduates often feel, he said, "that they are second class officers, since they must ask to remain."

"Moreover," Secretary Gates added, "it has now been found that the need for Regular officers from the NROTC source exceeds the number of applicants for retention."

About 25,000 applicants attempt to obtain Holloway backing each year, and approximately 2,000 are selected by the Navy. Those who win appointments receive free tuition, textbooks, fees, uniforms, $50 per month retainer pay, subsistence, initial travel to the university and from the university to cruise ports and return.

The first students to complete the program were graduated in 1950. Those commissioned in both the Navy and Marine Corps that year and in the four succeeding years totaled 7,027 of whom only 1,271—or about 18%—remained as career officers.

More than 10,000 others have since entered the program but the number who will remain in the two Services is not known since most have not yet reached the point at which they must notify the Navy of their decision.

Capt. Wells Leads New Bainbridge Unit

Enlisted Personnel Distribution Office Continental United States, (EPDOCONUS), under Capt. W. C. Wells, has been placed in commission at the Bainbridge, Md., Naval Training Center.

Its mission is to control the qualitative and quantitative distribution of Naval enlisted personnel throughout the continental limits of the United States.

Here's how the new assignment procedure works:

First the individual comes up for reassignment. This information is sent from the Bureau of Naval Personnel to the Personnel Accounting Machine Installation Continental United States (PAMICONUS) in card form.

On this card is the complete history of the individual, including previous naval experience, education, etc. Of paramount importance is the man's duty preference.

These cards are then processed by PAMICONUS and forwarded to the Control Center at EPDOCONUS where they are broken down and sent to the distributor for the preferred area.

The distributor notes the preferred area and attempts to match this with the area in which this man is needed most. He starts with the first choice and works down. In the majority of cases so far, it has been possible to give most men their first or second preference.

Echelon of progress:

Here is the first jet trainer specifically designed to meet most of the Navy's jet training requirements in one airplane—the T2J Buckeye by North American Aviation. It is being used to school Navy pilots for the new era of Mach 2 carrier-based airplanes such as Navy's A3J Vigilante, which is also built by NAA.

Fifteen years ago pilots were trained to fly top-performance aircraft of 360 mph. Today 1400 mph and above is the order of the day. At speeds exceeding those of fighter planes of World War II, the T2J not only prepares pilots for this higher performance, but is capable of reducing the training schedule as much as a month.

T2J trains crews for Navy's new Mach 2 manned weapon systems

There need be no lost "transition time" between phases.

Pilot safety is a prime concern in T2J design. Its stall speed is only 80 mph and it lands handily at 85 mph. The instructor sits in tandem, behind and 10 inches higher than the student—and forward of the wing for maximum visibility. A rocket-catalyzed emergency escape system—which has already saved lives in service—operates at all air speeds, even after touchdown.

Designed to meet the Navy's new concept of a single trainer to prepare pilots for high-performance jet aircraft, the T2J is in service today as the airplane that will match this concept for many years to come.

General White Will Fight For B-70; Stresses Need For Joint Strategic Command

General Thomas D. White has given a preview of forthcoming Congressional testimony in which he will emphasize the importance of the budget-hit B-70 bomber and the need for creation of a U.S. Strategic Command to include weapons resources of all Services.

In an address 11 January to the National Press Club in Washington, D. C., the Air Force Chief of Staff told of progress being made with the air-launched 1000-mile range ballistic missile, Sky Bolt, and he said "this combination of aircraft and missile will provide our country with the most mobile striking power ever achieved."

Asked by newsmen to assess the importance of manned aircraft in view of the B-70 cutback, General White replied:

"I have often said that as far into the future as I can see—and maybe I don't see too far, but I think I can see another 10 years and maybe more—there will be a requirement for manned aircraft, I think, in every field of aeronautical combat."

The Chief of Staff was asked specifically to comment on a statement by General Thomas S. Power, Cinc of SAC, that the B-70 is essential to national security (see THE JOURNAL 12 December 1959). "Will you kick over the traces and ask Congress to restore funds to keep this bomber on the desired development and production schedule?", a newsmen inquired.

General White said: "Well, obviously, I lost a good part of a decision; and I hope, equally obviously, I wouldn't be here now if I weren't able to accept that.

"I think it is also fair to state," General White continued, "that in properly constituted places, where I am under interrogation, you can be certain that I will testify honestly and according to my conviction."

Reporters, who knew that General White meant by this his upcoming testimony on Capitol Hill, laughed and then applauded the response.

Another critical question concerned General White's views on a U.S. Strategic Command. "What is your attitude toward the creation of a single, over-all Strategic Command to include both SAC and the Navy's Polaris submarines?", he was asked.

General Power of SAC, although not pinpointing his answer to any particular weapons, told THE JOURNAL at Offutt AFB, Nebr., last month that the Nation must have improved operational control over all strategic weapons.)

At the Press Club, General White said: "I am glad to answer this question because a lot of misinformation has been published on it, not the fault of the publisher but a lot of it, in my opinion, has been deliberate misinformation."

"My position on the strategic command is not that the Polaris submarine be placed under the Strategic Air Command, but quite the contrary; that the Strategic Air Command itself be made subordinate to an over-all United States Strategic Command, comprising all of our strategic weapons systems under one head, the head of which might be, in the initial stages, or until the Army has a strategic weapons system, either an Air Force officer or a naval officer.

The staff would be a joint staff.

"This concept, in my opinion, would be completely in accord with the Reorganization Act, an exact parallel to many of our unified commands, a good example of which is the Pacific Command,

THE CHIEF ON MATS

General White was asked to comment on the peacetime role of MATS and "when, if ever, MATS, will bow to the wishes of Congress and get out of the airline business."

He answered by declaring that MATS is a "very important component of our Armed Forces." He said that as a byproduct of training, MATS provides airlift that would cost about $750 million to contract for with the airlines.

"Now that might be well and good," General White added, "but the airlines are not, presently at least, able and perhaps willing to take over the immediate requirements that military contingencies can place on MATS."

He stressed that "in order to keep such a force viable, it must train, it must fly certain number of hours, and the byproduct of that flying is airlift which it is in the interest of the United States, and particularly in the interest of the taxpayer, to take advantage of and to use it."

which is under the command of Admiral Felt, and is comprised of three subordinate components instead of two, as I visualize initially for the U. S. Strategic Command.

"Under the Pacific Command is a naval component, the Pacific Fleet; the Army Forces, Pacific; and the Air Forces, Pacific. All three of these components report to Admiral Felt. Admiral Felt has a joint staff, and it seems to me that in such an expensive, may I say, as well as such a vital field as the strategic retaliation, the establishment of a single command authority is absolutely essential.

"Now, as to the value of Polaris, I am a supporter of Polaris. I think it is fair to say, as in the case of some other weapons systems, it is not perfected; but it is coming along, I hope and I believe, very well. I think it will add significantly to our strategic retaliatory capability. I think it will vastly complicate the enemy's defensive problem just as I think it will vastly complicate our offensive strategic problem. And, therefore, while I am for it, I also think it ought to be part of an over-all strategic command."

In addition to his comments on the need for a Mach 3 bomber, such as the B-70, General White said that a 2,000 mile per hour transport "would almost inevitably have to be a follow-on to the military development in that field of the really great expense in developing such a machine."

The Chief of Staff said that the B-70 "could carry some two or three score of people to any place on the globe within five hours. It could carry, as I recall, five

Col. Cage Urges Expanded Role For Carib Air Command School

ALBROOK AFB
CANAL ZONE

AN expanded and higher level role for the Caribbean Air Command's School for Latin America here is advocated by its commander, Col. Phil B. Cage, USAF.

At present, the school primarily is devoted to the technical training of officers and airmen from Latin American countries.

Over 90% of its students are Latin American enlisted men, with the highest officer grade enrolled that of major.

Basic purpose of the school, Colonel Cage told THE JOURNAL in an interview here, is "to foster understanding and promote better relations" between the U. S. and Latin American Nations.

Colonel Cage says: "We believe we should be working with military people, lieutenant colonels and majors, who in the next four or five years will be sitting in higher military positions and making both political and military decisions which we hope will be of advantage to the U.S."

WILL YOU SUCCEED AS A CIVILIAN?

Our experience in helping thousands of your fellow men to make a smooth and effective transition to a new career proves that you can. Yet, statistics show that more than half of all retiring officers change jobs within a year.

Why? Because they fail to bring all their experience and aptitudes into objective focus to learn what job, what level, is right and best for them.

Our techniques, reported by Harvard Business Review and recommended by over 75 colleges, takes the guess work out of career planning, translates your total abilities into civilian terms, lead you confidently to the right position, at the right level, and guarantee you a full measure of satisfaction and financial reward.

Why not let these techniques help you. Write for details — or if convenient arrange a free appointment to discuss your future.

Colonel Cage emphasized that this would not mean a change in the mission of his school, but merely an expansion of the school to provide higher level training.

The expanded mission would require the addition of some officer-instructors to the present staff of seven officers, 107 airmen and 30 civilians.

Since the school opened in 1947 some 4,500 officers and airmen from 20 Latin American countries have attended courses.

These students undergo both technical and professional training in jet aircraft, maintenance, communications, weather, aeromedical, airborne radio, personnel, supply and more than nine other related courses.

The school offers administrative and technical training to officers and airmen. It is responsible for promoting Western Hemisphere solidarity, and provides Spanish language translation service of USAF manuals and other publications.

Colonel Cage feels that the second mission of the school is equally important to that of instruction.

Besides Colonel Cage, other key personnel at the school include: Majors Edward M. Montoya, Kenneth Barber, Captains Victor H. Bolado, Eldon L. Stevens and Felix Hodge, and CWO Robert T. Pearce.

"Posture" Hearings Will Be Critical

The Senate and House Armed Services Committees are poised to launch "Defense Posture" hearings that will have a major impact on present and future weapons programs and also on manpower policies in the Fighting Forces. These hearings will set the stage for detailed examination of Service plans in the consideration of the fiscal '61 budget by the Appropriations Committees.

The Armed Services Committees are certain to ask probing questions concerning the effect of such actions as the cancellation of the F-108 interceptor, the drastic revision of the B-70 Mach 3 bomber program, and the failure of the Defense Department to release funds for acceleration of the Nike Zeus program. The experienced Armed Services Committees surely will want to know the cost in combat effectiveness of deactivations which are taking place in all the Services. The new Marine Corps Commandant, General David M. Shoup, will be asked if he agrees with his predecessor, General Randolph McC. Pate, that the Marines should have at least 200,000 men, instead of the 175,000 limitation imposed by the Administration.

Also on the military manpower front, it is to be hoped that the Committees will use the "Posture" hearings to inquire about the Pentagon's reasons for failing to implement Responsibility Pay, and why Proficiency Pay has been limited to $30 per month. Service attitudes concerning the $10 Alert Pay being advocated by the Strategic Air Command also may be surveyed.

The Armed Services Committees, always concerned when there are threats to their responsibilities, will question Secretary of Defense Gates and his associates concerning the new promotion directive which accents the requirement of joint staff duty in selections to general and flag rank. Many contend that the Secretary of Defense, as a result of the new order, will wield influence on selection boards that was not intended by Congress.

But beyond the matter of individual weapons programs and specific shortcomings in manpower administration, the 1960 "Posture" hearings will seek information on progress that has been made in the Services. Most importantly, they will bring to light vital information concerning the views of professional military men as to what more needs to be done to assure national security.

Because these hearings are of such importance, THE JOURNAL, as the Nation's only weekly publication covering the total Defense Establishment, will give extensive coverage to the action on Capitol Hill beginning in next week's issue.

Budget-Thinking Must Not Stop Progress

There are growing and hopeful signs that the budget-inspired move to stifle all future progress in the design and development of manned military aircraft will meet with opposition in Congress.

General Thomas D. White, Chief of Staff of the Air Force, in a forthright speech to the National Press Club this week insisted that it was not the Air Force which cracked down on the development of the promising B-70 Mach 3 long range bomber. He added that "in the proper forum," by which he meant Congress, "where I will be asked about it, it is certain I will testify honestly and in accordance with my convictions."

The Air Force Chief of Staff was not questioned about the F-108 Mach 3 interceptor, which also was shot down by the budget-minded, but it is safe to predict that the General will protest that cancellation also.

Further support for the B-70 program may be expected from SAC's hard hitting Commander in Chief, General Thomas S. Power, who (see THE JOURNAL 12 December 1959) told a Journal staff member that he will do everything he can to emphasize the need for the advanced bomber as a natural follow-on to the B-52.

Lt. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, Air Defense Commander, already is on record (see THE JOURNAL 12 September 1959) as "wholehearted wanting the F-108 in ADC's inventory. He says that he does not know definitely that the Soviets have a Mach 3 bomber, but if they should come up with one we would be in a serious position if we do not have an interceptor that can cope with it.

Meanwhile, Senator Claire Engle (D-Calif.) has told the Senate that the slash in the B-70 program is a blunder. His remarks do not receive immediate support from Senator Stuart Symington (D-Mo.).

General White also revealed that the Air Force has under development a "Sky Bolt" ballistic missile designed to be launched from bombers 1000 miles from their target. Ideal aircraft for launching such missiles would be either the B-70 or the atomic bomber, the progress of which has been slowed down to a walk by the budget pinch.

There is no responsible military leader who foresees the passing of manned aircraft. In fact, all predict that because of man's discrimination and decision-making powers, there will always be need of man-operated aerial equipment.

In the face of these expert professional opinions, the Nation finds itself in the position of not having a single advanced type military aircraft in the research and development stage.

Will Congress and the people permit progress to be stopped for the purpose of making a better balance sheet?

READERS' VIEWS

Lawyers And Engineers

■ Concerning the continuing push for incentive pay for lawyers as reported in recent issues, I'd like to ask the following:

- (1) Is the gap between ourselves and the Russians in Space Technology due to a shortage of skilled lawyers, or a shortage of skilled engineers?
- (2) How many of the SE lawyers will be commanding CB Battalions in attack landings alongside Marines in the next war?
- (3) Aren't Army Engineers and Navy and Air Force Engineers professionals; or isn't engineering considered a profession anymore?
- (4) Could it be that since the American Medical Association; the ADA and now, apparently, the American Bar Association have succeeded in getting incentive pay for their brethren that we must quickly organize an American Engineer Association?

Academy Leave "Rude Shock"

■ Reference is made to your front page article "ACADEMY LEAVES LACK UNIFICATION" (2 January).

Why should there be exact and identical leave periods for cadets, midshipmen and air cadets? (You neglected to mention members of the Coast Guard Academy.)

Each Service academy has a slightly different pattern for its curriculum, technical training, etc. Each has its own thoughts and considered opinion concerning time requirements for leave, holidays, study, training, trips and athletics. It is extremely difficult to make a determination of which academy has the best (or better) overall system.

As a cadet and an officer, the differences in Christmas Leave between the academies did not worry me, nor do they appear to worry any of my contemporaries—Army, Navy or Coast Guard.

Uniformity for the sake of uniformity is illogical and usually inefficient. It has an end result of reducing the "uniformed" or regimented group to a mediocre activity—an average or Permit the service academies to pursue their search for progress and the optimum with minimum interference PLEASE.

For THE JOURNAL to slant such an article in that particular way was a rude shock to this naive soul.

President Asks $13 Billion Military Budget; Competitive West Point Appointments Proposed In '63

10 Years Ago—Thirteen billion dollars are provided for the military functions of the Department of Defense in the National Budget for 1951 submitted to the Congress by the President last Monday.

50 Years Ago—We present hearty felicitations to our venerable British contemporary, The Army and Navy Gazette, on the celebration of its half-century anniversary. We call it venerable because it antedates the establishment of the ARMY AND NAVY JOURNAL by three years.

96 Years Ago—We hope the question of competitive examinations of candidates for admission to West Point, to be substituted for the present method of Congressional appointments, will not be allowed to drop. The last Board of Visitors to the Academy recommended that the number of cadets be increased to four hundred, that the age of admission be advanced, that the standard of attainments, which is substantially the same as that of sixty years ago, be also advanced, and the competitive examinations, to which we have referred, be substituted for the appointment system.

Here's The Word From The New Marine Corps Commandant

all Marines, naval personnel and civilians who comprise our operating organization: Good Morning. Although I speak only to this small representative group personally, provision has been made whereby these remarks will be either read or heard by the majority of Marines of all ranks at all posts and stations.

A few days ago, by taking the oath of office, I accepted the challenge inherent in the title of "22d Commandant of the United States Marine Corps." I personally assume every responsibility connected therewith. I am mindful of this great burden and I know that I cannot properly discharge these responsibilities alone. I am there is no justification for the continuation of some 357 officers in this category, and that their designations should be revoked so they will be subject to the laws applicable to unrestricted officers. Legislation will be requested to accomplish this.

Integrate Staff Functions

7. We shall have a closer integration of staff functions within this Headquarters. We have made great progress in this area over the past years. For example, during my first tour here we had seven distinct personnel departments and a few fuzzy ones. Today I conclude we have somewhere between one and one-half to two and one-half. Soon I expect to have but one. Other areas of possible closer integration including that of ground and air staffs, are being studied. The exact course of action has not been determined. But under no circumstances shall such action in any way reduce the careful coordination required between Marine Corps Aviation and the Bureau of Naval Weapons and other Navy agencies.

8. Over the years there seems to have been a remodeling of our yardstick for the measurement of satisfaction in doing duty as an officer. There has also been, I think, some change in the sense of values of many of our Marines. Before World War II we meant it when we said the Corps came first. Today I fear some are just paying lip service to that expression. Let us return to the old philosophy of selfless-service among all ranks.

9. Marines are expeditionary creatures by their very nature. We are expected to be able to pack and move out on a few hours notice. Exuding unhappiness in the absence of four to six months advance notice of change of station is unhealthy. Even with this much warning commanders and individuals have been known to use this advance notice only as a basis for negotiation for changes. Let us help the Director of Personnel, not hinder him.

Personal Honor

10. I am greatly disturbed by negotiations of another nature. Of late, there has been flagrant and self-seeking disregard of a time honored regulation. I refer, of course, to Article 1258 of Navy Regulations which expressly prohibits soliciting for gifts for superiors or members of their families. The regulation is equally clear in prohibiting seniors from accepting gifts. There is no objection, however, to giving or accepting a memento of little intrinsic value. In my view, anyone who solicits money for a gift is merely apple polishing to gain points for himself. A commander who accepts a gift impeaches his own honor. Both violate regulations. This practice must cease.

11. While I am on the subject of personal honor and judgement, I want to emphasize the danger inherent in acceptance of social invitations extended by defense contractors, and other businessmen. With the best of motives, officers can unwittingly place themselves in a position where their conduct in such matters is open to serious misinterpretation. You must exercise the best of good judgement in your relationships with people doing business with the government.

12. Many Bureaus and offices in the Navy Department, and other services habitually communicate with this Headquarters or directly with field commands to advise that they plan to detail a certain officer to fill a certain billet and that they hope such assignment is acceptable. Of course such a communication requires a reply. I hope to save many exchanges of messages and correspondence by requesting that they desist from this practice. I have, and I expect you to have the necessary faith and confidence in those responsible for the selection of officers for assignment to the Marine Corps that they will select the ones best fitted to fill the billets. We can always let it be known if the one who arrives can't "cut the mustard." This will be most unusual, I'm sure. Further, I don't plan to send communications over the world asking various commanders whether or not a certain Marine officer is acceptable for assignment to their staffs. I hope these commanders will show towards me the same trust and confidence in my detailing of an officer qualified to do the job. I want them to let me know when any Marine officer doesn't meet the standards.

13. After 15 months with the Fleet Marine Force, 7th Fleet, I continue to be firmly convinced that our Fleet Marine Force units in the Western Pacific are properly there, and properly without dependents. I am even more firmly convinced that a tour of 15 months is too long. I am going to take every action open to me to reduce the length of this tour and still maintain our posture of determined readiness.

14. The mission of the Marine Corps and our position within the Department of the Navy is so well defined by law and order as to need no embellishment by me.

Nevertheless, I feel that increased emphasis must be placed on discharging the responsibilities with which we have been entrusted in the field of doctrine and development related to landing force operations. We must be aggressive, visionary, persistent, and timely.

15. The Marine Corps has consistently supported any proposed changes in defense organization which we believe would, in fact, promote the efficiency of operations and administration and at the same time enhance the combat readiness and effectiveness of the Services. This we shall continue to do. With this in mind, I plan no change in the Marine Corps position on the question of merger, one service, a single chief of staff, or a national general staff.

PERSONNEL AND MANPOWER MATTERS

My immediate predecessor stood here four years ago aware of the important missions and responsibilities of the Marine Corps. They haven't changed materially.

The military-civilian team of the Marine Corps today however, has some 28,500 less personnel with which to fulfill its responsibilities.

Our budget estimate for 1961 is for funds to support a 175,000-man Marine Corps. The percentage of our three division-wing teams that may simultaneously be committed to combat and the location, intensity, and duration of the conflict could be such as to properly require a ready Marine Corps of 200,000; 215,000; 235,000 or even more.

Nevertheless our most important job is always to think and work hard to get as much fight from our platoon as we possibly can.

We will make every effort to relate promotions at all levels to the Marine Corps' requirement in the various skills and specialties. We must be more concerned with evaluating a man's potential for promotion by how he actually performs. Written tests are valuable but not to the exclusion of performance on the job.

There are, what has appeared to me to be, inconsistencies in this so-called field of personnel management. For example, an officer must take a physical examination every year. But the backbone of our Corps, the noncommissioned officer, need take only one physical during his entire enlistment, which often in the more senior ranks is only once in every six years. Again, an officer can be promoted from 2d Lieutenant to General without encountering an examination related to his professional qualifications for promotion. Yet we seem to be forever examining noncommissioned officers professionally for promotion. In fact noncommissioned officers are required to take both general qualification tests and technical tests for promotion to every grade from E-3 to E-7, inclusive.

Worm In Apple

Another worm which I think has gotten into our apple is the approach some have taken in this business of career management. I first became aware of this when in command of the Basic School in 1951. Some of the young lieutenants spent endless hours scheming and planning their future promotion progress. It was always based on the absolute necessity of getting a succession of certain jobs under the command of certain officers, and of getting assignments where the chances of career-killing mistakes are few. I still believe the best career management pattern for all ranks to follow, both officer and enlisted, is to carry out your boss's orders just as fast as you can and as well as you can. And, make an extended effort to do the job assigned better than the man who assigned it to you thought it could be done. If you're scheming right now how to get to Paris for your next tour, it's time to retire.

Aided by your requests for assignments on your fitness reports and the recommendations of your commanders, we will, at this Headquarters, make every conscientious effort to assign you to jobs commensurate with your demonstrated potential for future assumption of greater responsibilities.

Personnel departments coping with the problems of duty assignments are always overtaxed. Ours is no exception. I propose to help them in the area of assignments to field commands. In so far as possible we will assign the ranks and skills to every command in numbers and qualifications in accordance with the approved billets. The commander will take the personnel assigned and run his command. If he can't do it, then one of two things is certain. The personnel he received should not continue to hold their rank and get superb fitness reports, or we need a new commander. The field commander can take care of the former.

Abolish Personal Letters

Further help to the Personnel Department is envisaged by the abolishing of the personal letter approach by field commanders regarding personnel assignments by name. It is hereby abolished. Last week, I saw more than 15 personal letters from field commanders to the Director of Personnel beseeching and competing for the assignment of specific individuals to their commands. If there is a situation which warrants action by this Headquarters, I shall expect you to use official channels. However, I will not object to a personal letter to me where in an exceptional case a commander believes this to be the best way to handle a peculiar or extraordinary personnel problem.

During my administration I do not expect to see the situation exist where a considerable number of personnel on the official and personal staffs of general officers go with them from post to post and endure the same duty assignments year after year without regard to what may be best for the Corps or the individual.

To me the term "general officer" denotes a certain definite thing. That is, that such an officer should be of such a degree of capacity, ability and personal character that he need not be restricted to one class or field of duty assignment. Naval aviation and supply general officers are surely qual-

THE THREAT OF A "ONE MAN" VETO to enactment of pay equalization legislation, effective 1 February, can be eliminated only if the White House moves with all its legislative liaison skill to overcome the opposition of Senator John Stennis (D-Miss). What is required is for the White House to muster such support for the measure that Senator Stennis will be blocked in his plan to use the emergency pay equalization bill as a springboard for a sweeping review of retired pay legislation.

THERE IS NO QUESTION that if Senator Stennis had not threatened to use the pay equalization hearings for a broad-gauged inquiry, the House Armed Services Committee already would have scheduled action on the measure. As detailed in a Page 1 story in this issue, Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the House Committee is wary of being trapped into a legislative situation in which his committee, in an effort to equalize retired pay, would find itself becoming involved in a "conference committee" situation on a bill of much wider effect.

THE WHITE HOUSE HAS THE INFLUENCE, if it chooses to use it, to convince Congress that the equalization plan should be considered on its merits alone, and that any other changes affecting retired pay should be considered separately. This issue will be the first in the new session of Congress in which legislative strategy and tactics will come to the fore on the Service front.

A FOUR-STAR BIRTHDAY PRESENT was made by President Eisenhower to Lt. Gen. Clark L. "Nick" Ruffner, Third Army Commander at Ft. McPherson, Ga. He was named 11 January to be a full general as U. S. Representative to the Military Committee and Standing Group of NATO. General Ruffner's 57th birthday was 12 January. The fourth generation of his family to serve in the Army—a son is a first lieutenant with USAEUR—General Ruffner, a V.M.I. Distinguished Military Graduate in '24, was a crack Army polo player in his early career. His hobbies now are confined largely to golf, which he plays in the low 80's, and bridge.

GENERAL RUFFNER WILL SUCCEED Admiral Walter F. Boone, who will retire 1 March. Admiral Boone's four-star billet will become available for other use by the Navy. One possibility: separation of the SACLANT, Atlantic Fleet, and U. S. Atlantic commands, now held by retiring Admiral Jerauld Wright, who will be succeeded by Admiral Robert B. Dennison, to 2 four-star billets, as was done in the Pacific.

NO YOUTH MOVEMENT CAN BE SEEN in the new list of Army general officer "makes." Maj. Gen. Edward J. O'Neill, who gets the three-star First Army command, will be 58 on 24 March. The youngest choice for two-star rank is Brig. Gen. Albert Watson, 50, USMA '30. The youngest officer named for brigadier general is Col. Robert C. Kyser, USMA '34, who will be 48 next month.

A NON-WEST POINT ENGINEER COLONEL, Howard K. Eggleston, 50, a '31 graduate of Rensselaer Polytechnical Institute, has been named for brigadier general. The other Corps of Engineers general officers are all graduates of the U. S. Military Academy. Colonel Eggleston will serve as Assistant Chief of Engineers for Military Supply. He is in the '34-year group, of which there were 6 in the new list of 19 nominations for brigadier general.

THE PENTAGON HAS HAD ITS SQUABBLIES, but few have been as boisterous as the two-day sessions this week (see Page 1) at which Defense Department officials discussed with industry representatives new rules—subsequently delayed—providing for "free choice" by Service families in the designation of movers to handle their household goods. The Pentagon sessions frequently seemed more like a high school ruckus than a serious attempt to formulate rules for the shipment of household goods that would be beneficial to Service families, the Government and the movers themselves. Opponents of "free choice" were under no restraint to stop the laughing—and many times jeering—which they carried on during Defense Department explanations of what it needs in the field of movement of household goods.

A FACT WHICH OPPONENTS OF FREE CHOICE unsuccessfully tried to bury during the meeting was that 33% of military families who recently were transferred complained of unsatisfactory moving service. The point received added emphasis from Col. Eael C. Hedlund, Air Force Director of Transportation Policy. He stressed that under the regulations calling for automatic rotation of contracts, the Services could not obtain quality service in the moving field.

LOOK FOR THE SENATE GOVERNMENT OPERATIONS COMMITTEE to probe further the need for expanded language training in the Armed Services, discussed in the Journal article (2 January) by Col. James L. Collins, jr., USA, Commandant of the Army Language School. The Committee has told The Journal it is "gravely concerned over the inadequacies of the Federal Government's overall foreign language training program" and the "future of the Army Language School."

THE MILITARY ASSISTANT TO THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE Brig. Gen. Carey A. Randall, USMC-Ret., who has been serving at the Pentagon since November 1950, will leave active duty next month. He was given an unusual "spot" promotion to brigadier general in March 1957 and retired in March 1959. A Marine Corps selection board subsequently failed to designate him for star rank. Because of heroism in the Pacific during WWII, where he won two Bronze Star Medals, General Randall's 1959 retirement before expiration of the "tombstone" authority means he will have the rank of major general on the retired list.

GENERAL RANDALL'S SUCCESSOR, as disclosed in The Journal issue of 26 December, will be Brig. Gen. George S. Brown, USAF, who had been Assistant to former Under Secretary, now Secretary of Defense Gates. Col. Edwin F. Black, USA, also formerly in the office of the Under Secretary of Defense, will be the second top military assistant to Mr. Gates.

THE NEW MARINE COMMANDANT'S BRILLIANT PRESENTATION to his Staff concerning what he hopes to accomplish in his four-year tour (see Page 11) contains this interesting declaration: "I wish to keep the public fully informed of our plans, policies, programs and developments, insofar as security measures permit." General David M. Shoup made this statement in the unclassified staff briefing on 4 January. His presentation was withheld from release for 3 days and then made available only on an inquiry basis.

THERE WILL BE SKEPTICS IN THE SERVICES who will suggest that Marine Commandant Shoup will be less than 100% successful in his efforts to abolish "personal letters" from officers regarding future assignments. There is no doubt that General Shoup's comments on the subject will cut down the out-of-channels correspondence, but ways will be found—phone calls for example—to pass the word in situations where discretion is the better part of valor.

RESTRICTIONS IMPOSED UPON SAC in telling its operational capabilities with the Atlas ICBM have resulted in a large segment of the population—including the Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman—not being aware that SAC crews have been on the ICBM firing line since last September. Hard on the heels of President Eisenhower's State of the Union Message, which hailed the Atlas progress, Senator Richard B. Russell (D-Ga) said that all firings had been made by civilian scientists and technicians. The Journal last week published 1959 SAC progress report which included the previously reported fact that a SAC crew had fired an "operational" Atlas from Vandenberg AFB, Calif., on 9 September.

SENATOR RUSSELL WASN'T THE ONLY PERSON who expressed himself on the Atlas operational status. The noted Radio and T.V. critic, John Crosby, commenting on the C.B.S. Reports program "The Space Lag" wrote that the show had "one bit of hard round news; namely, that the United States now possesses one lone operational inter-continental missile, an Atlas, with a hydrogen bomb warhead, all ready to take off for you know where at 19 minutes notice." "Curiously," said Mr. Crosby, "I found this lone weapon comforting. I didn't think we had any ICMB's ready for war at the moment."

SAC LEADERS WHO HAVE PROTESTED limitations that were imposed by Washington on informing the American public about its operational missile capability can and will make the point that if Senator Russell and Mr. Crosby make statements based on a lack of information, then something more surely needs to be done to tell this story.

THE ARMY IS CONSIDERING an annual "One Army Conference" to follow up the successful meeting called by Secretary Wilber M. Brucker last year. Tentative plans call for participation of the Association of the U. S. Army, National Guard Association, Reserve Officers Association, and state units of these organizations. Unless held in conjunction with the AUSA's annual meeting, the "One Army Conference" seemingly would detract to some extent from AUSA's objective in speaking for the entire Army.

THE NAVY IS SO SHORT of qualified Engineering Duty officers that late this summer—after 46 years—it will not be able to provide an officer to serve as Chief of the Industrial Division of the Panama Canal Zone Company. That post is now held by Capt. Geoffrey Thompson, who will be succeeded by a civilian.

"LEAVE IT FOR THE BIRDS" is the warning of instructors at the Army's Jungle Warfare Training Center in the Canal Zone (see page 1). Instructors teach jungle novices from all the Services that as a general guide "eat what the monkeys eat, but not what the birds choose."

EVEN BEFORE HE WAS ELECTED, when he said he did not favor making the JCS Chairman a five-star officer, President Eisenhower was reluctant to raise the rank of top billets in the Armed Forces. He has now made an exception (see Page 25). The Chief Executive has proposed that the Commandant of the Coast Guard be raised from the rank of vice admiral to admiral and the Assistant Commandant from rear admiral to vice admiral. The President acted on the recommendation of Secretary of the Treasury Robert B. Anderson, former Secretary of the Navy and Deputy Secretary of Defense. The Coast Guard is under the Treasury.

Capitol Crossfire Threatens Prompt Action On President's Pay Equalization Plan

should be directly geared to active duty pay of a member of the same rank and length of service. The purpose of this legislation is to reestablish this traditional principle which has come to be considered almost inviolate."

Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex), who has announced his support for the President's request, and who would be in charge of House hearings on the subject, told THE JOURNAL he has received no word from Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the full Committee that the measure will be referred to the Kilday Subcommittee for hearings.

Unless such action is taken, Congressman Kilday's efforts in the bill's behalf will be stymied.

Chairman Vinson told THE JOURNAL he has "no comment" on the proposal at this time.

His reluctance to take a position on the bill could stem from a desire to wait and see exactly how the President treats the cost factor in his budget message. But it also could stem from what Capitol sources see as a major obstacle to initiation of action on the bill by the House.

Senator John C. Stennis (D-Miss), who heads the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on manpower and personnel matters, has voiced opposition to equalizing retired pay for those retired prior to 1 June 1958.

He also stated that if the Senate is forced to act in the matter it "doubtless" will have to dig deeply into the overall retirement laws and consider the possibility of instituting contributory retirement for the Armed Services.

Although the House normally initiates legislation on military pay, Capitol Hill informants are of the opinion that Senator Stennis' widely-publicized statement may have effectively blocked the House from acting first on the retired pay proposal.

The reasoning behind this view makes sense to those who understand the complicated legislative procedures involved. Here is the difficulty as Capitol sources see it:

If the House Armed Services Committee holds hearings on the retirement equalization plan, approves it and wins House passage for the measure, the bill then goes before the Stennis Subcommittee.

That group, carrying out the expressed dictates of its chairman, could then begin a major reappraisal of the entire retirement system. This could culminate in a wholesale revision of the retirement laws.

The end result—possibly setting up a contributory system—could be a complete re-write of the House equalization measure.

The next step is the one that possibly has House Armed Services Committee Chairman Vinson worried.

If the Senate substantially re-writes the House-passed bill, setting up entirely new criteria for retirement and retired pay, any further House action would be relegated to the "conference committee."

This would mean that only a handful of House Armed Services Committee members would have the opportunity to consider the Senate changes, and that such consideration would take place in the hurried atmosphere of the conference room, behind closed doors.

Capitol sources say Chairman Vinson might prefer to wait for Senate action on pay equalization, rather than risk haphazard consideration of major changes in the retirement system.

With Senator Stennis already on record in opposition to the proposed equalization, however, there also is speculation that the Senate might refuse to initiate action on its own.

The complications are certain to bring some intricate maneuvering on the part of White House liaison officials. They can be expected to seek Senate support for the measure to carry out the President's expressed desires.

Army Navy Air Force Journal 17

NAVY MAY OBJECT:

Carib Command Will Propose Revised Latin American Military Aid Control

U. S. CARIBBEAN COMMAND
QUARRY HEIGHTS, CZ

THE U. S. Caribbean Command, under Lt. Gen. Ridgely Gaither, USA, will attempt to unify all South American military assistance planning at Headquarters here.

Implementing recommendations made last year in the Draper Report on foreign assistance, the Command will propose a new Manual for Western Hemisphere Plans and Programs.

The Manual will propose integration of all Latin American Mutual Assistance Program plans by the Caribbean Command, to achieve closer coordination of Army, Navy and Air Force projects.

At present, Army and Air Force programs are integrated through the U. S. Army Caribbean and the Caribbean

Air Command here.

The changes suggested by the manual would require that Navy military assistance planning for Latin America be put in charge of the U. S. Caribbean Command's 15th Naval District.

This proposal likely will be resisted by the Navy which controls its Mutual Assistance Program activities from the office of RAdm. Harold M. Briggs, Director of Pan American Affairs and the U. S. Naval Mission Division of the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations in Washington.

During fiscal 1960 the supply of Naval materials to South American countries has accounted for most of the money spent by the Military Assistance Program in South America.

Coordinating the Mutual Assistance Programs of all three Services, CaribCom officials feel, might save money by providing a more balanced and more closely coordinated program.

Caribbean Command officials anticipate a decrease in the amount of materials supplied to Latin American countries, and a substantial increase in the training programs set up for South American armed forces.

Canal Zone Families Face Troubles At Least Until May Elections

PANAMA CANAL ZONE

THE New Year has brought seemingly improved relations between military and civilian families in the Canal Zone and the people of Panama.

The streets appear orderly and incidents between Panamanian and Americans are now infrequent.

But under the guise of calmness runs an undercurrent of fear that the riotous incidents of last 3 and 28 November could be repeated.

Military families make it a prudent practice of leaving the Canal Zone to shop, eat or relax in Panama as infrequently as possible.

One senior officer cautioned a JOURNAL reporter here to go nowhere in Panama at night, except by taxi. He said that women should never venture off the two main streets of Panama City, even in broad daylight, and at night should never appear alone on the streets.

A JOURNAL

Others, while slightly less cautious, still feel that there will be a continuing agitation between Panama and the U.S., at least until after the Panamanian elections in May.

Service families in the Canal are especially disappointed that Panamanian authorities at first refused to lift a hand to deter the riots which took place on 3 November when the Panamanian Guardia Nacional was forbidden to take any action against unruly mobs threatening to invade the Canal Zone.

With the help of the Guardia Nacional on 28 November, the Panamanian rioters were kept in check, but officials note they seemed to be more well organized and effective than their predecessors earlier in the month.

One reason for the greater effectiveness of the later November disturbances, it was pointed out to THE JOURNAL, was a small but active Communist core which appeared to provide the leadership for many rioting groups.

Communist activity was not apparent in the forefront of the 3 November incidents.

It is feared in some quarters that Panama's small Communist group may become increasingly active in agitating for future Panamanian assaults upon the Canal Zone.

At the present time, it would appear that Panama's President de la Guardia has decided to take a firmer hand in preventing further riots such as occurred on 3 and 28 November.

His decision is expected to keep to a minimum, but not entirely eliminate, hostile actions towards Americans in the Canal Zone.

Marine Board Meets

A selection board is in session to recommend Marines for permanent limited duty officer, temporary limited duty officer, and warrant officer in the second phase of the FY '60 LDO/WO program.

Maj. Gen. Donald M. Weller, G-1, is President of the 12-officer board.

Headquarters has nominated 192 for permanent LDO, 512 for temporary LDO, and 1,148 for WO. The board is authorized to choose 275 WO's. Tentative plans call for selection of 17 permanent LDO's and 83 temporary LDO's.

The WO selection list is slated for publication in mid-February. Successful candidates who have never served in warrant rank will be ordered to MCS Quantico for a training course.

The names of LDO selectees will be issued in March. All permanent LDO appointments will be to the rank of second lieutenant. Temporary LDO appointments will be made in the ranks of captain and first lieutenant.

Hong Kong Leave Is Far East Prize

they go to the store and buy their item for cash at the Navy's wholesale contract price.

They miss the favorite Chinese sport of haggling over the price, but they get the best goods at the lowest prices.

The British welcome our enlisted men at their club and offer them rooms with towel and soap for 22 cents a night, or if that is too expensive they can stay in the dormitory for 14 cents a night.

Another great source of help to our visitors here is the Service-men's Guides Association, sponsored by the American Community in Hong Kong and a number of religious organizations. They man an Information Center, members of the American Women's Association serve as volunteer hostesses, and they set up tours and give other aid to the visitors.

The Red Chinese could swallow Hong Kong if they wanted to, but the fact is it provides them with one of their major openings for imports and exports from and to the West. Hong Kong in British hands is of far more value to both nations than it would be under Chinese Communist control.

U. S. Customs will not permit any Red China goods into the U. S., so our visitors must be careful what they purchase to bring home. Goods that might be of Red Chinese origin, such as silks, jade, ivory carvings, linen, etc., must be accompanied by a "Comprehensive Certificate of Origin" to prove that it did not come from Red China. The British authorities will investigate and issue such a certificate for a nominal sum.

Households Goods "Free Choice" Controversy Heads For Capitol Action

companies, issued a new policy statement on 8 December.

That policy called for elimination of the automatic rotation system previously employed in the hiring of carriers and provided greater opportunity for individual Service families to choose the company they wanted to carry their household goods.

A storm of protest resulted from owners of moving van companies who contended that the new policy would give too great an advantage to larger carriers.

A two-day hearing was held at the Pentagon this week. It resulted in a decision by Defense officials to suspend implementation of the new policy until 1 July. During the interim, new policies will be worked out, which, hopefully, will be less controversial.

The moving van companies which favor the "free choice" provision, and also those who oppose it, have powerful support on Capitol Hill, and there is no question that the issue will be debated in forthcoming Congressional hearings.

Opposition to the December "free choice" policy statement culminated at special Pentagon meetings 11 and 12 January between Defense Department officials and Industry representatives.

During the session, Representative James Roosevelt (D-Calif.) championed the cause of the dissatisfied movers. He called for withdrawal or postponement of the effective date of the 8 December directive.

Congressman Roosevelt's demand was followed by similar requests, conveyed in messages to the meeting, by Senators E. L. (Bob) Bartlett (D-Alaska) and Sam J. Ervin, Jr. (D-N. C.).

Senator Ervin, a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, threatened to request a special Congressional investigation if the Defense Department policy were not rescinded or suspended.

A powerful Congressional supporter of the changes, who did not appear at the meeting, is Senator Styles Bridges (R-N. H.). The ranking Republican member of the Appropriations Committee, he advocated complete free choice of movers for all Service families.

Under the Defense Department proposal, Service families would be given a choice of movers, provided the one they pick is among the lowest cost, high-quality firms available, and provided also that the Government could maintain a suitable number of carriers for peak traffic periods.

Defense Department officials stressed at the Pentagon briefings this week that this did not mean complete free choice of movers on the part of military families. The final choice of a carrier would be left with local transportation officers, whose primary duty would be to distribute household goods shipments with regard to the quality of service rendered by local movers.

Some movers expressed fears that the new policy would drive them out of business.

It was claimed by some at the meeting that four big moving concerns receive 50% of all Government moving business. Defense Department statistics show that these four received approximately 29% of all Government business during the first six months of 1959.

Yielding to pressure from the vocal opponents of "free choice" for Service families, Defense Department Director of Transportation Policy, Dr. Gayton B. Germane, announced at the close of meetings 12 January that the 8 December moving directive would be suspended until 1 July.

Before new regulations are implemented, Dr. Germane said, Defense Department officials and moving industry leaders will get together to discuss what the new directive should contain and what the implementing regulations should be.

GRUMMAN STUDIES NUCLEAR-POWERED MISSILE

A feasibility study by Grumman Aircraft Engineering Corporation to investigate the application of a nuclear propulsion unit to a guided missile is expected to be completed by the end of March.

The investigation covers these areas: (1) heat transfer properties (2) reactor analysis (3) reactor shielding (4) radiation effects on materials (5) materials which could be used to make the reactor (and thus the missile) more compact.

The study is being conducted on the initiative of Grumman under a dollar per year contract with the Bureau of Naval Weapons. This arrangement allows Grumman access to classified information on contingent nuclear studies.

Grumman is also conducting feasibility studies on the application of nuclear power for other surface, underwater, air, and space vehicles.

General Shoup Passes The Word To The Marine Corps On Many Subjects

ned to command a wider variety of our posts, depots, and stations and to hold a wider variety of staff jobs. It shall come to pass. Further I don't expect officers in the rank of lieutenant general to make a career in this rank. When the time comes to assign them to new jobs in a lower rank it will be done with the best interests of the Corps in mind.

Also I believe the grade distribution within our present general officer rank will be sufficiently responsive to our needs. However, I think some up and some down grading of certain billets is in order. As an example, in due course I propose to make the top billets at Barstow and Albany major generals' billets.

The stringent economies of manpower and resources require that every individual be assigned to an appropriate duty and required to produce commensurate with his potential and capabilities. We can afford no loss of productivity through willful misassignment, improper evaluation of capabilities, or selfish concealment of potential.

"Average Marine" Units

It appears to me that through our strict application of criteria for assignment of personnel to certain billets we have created a condition where some types of organizations are almost completely purged of personnel with the intelligence and capabilities peculiar to the upper twenty-five percent or so of our overall manpower. I intend to mix them up a bit—to have all types of units, where at all possible, operate with the "Average Marine."

Our Fleet Marine Force is our main reason for existence. An outfit is only as good as the men in it. Therefore, we must insure the ability of the Fleet Marine Force to skillfully and professionally meet its requirements by sending a proper cross-section of Marines to it.

Reports to me indicate that, during the past year, commanders are drifting away from one of the basic concepts of command—training within the command. There have been too many requisitions and requests for already trained personnel by commands whose primary peacetime tasks included development of the self-same skills. These requests have been made in the face of certain knowledge that such personnel could come only from another identical command, or from commands whose training capabilities in the areas of specialization desired were patently less than the requesting command.

Every commander, at whatever level of command, must understand that training of personnel assigned to his command is a basic part of his mission, that other commands have similar problems and cannot also solve his problems. Matters of effectiveness of training and economy of manpower and money require that each commander exert every effort to fulfill his own training requirements for individuals. Presently, appropriate staff sections are preparing plans to encourage and assist in this program.

I intend to pursue a policy of raising individual performance standards and improving stability in our units and individual billets. However, with the small Corps that we have I am firmly convinced that we must keep only the worthwhile individuals. Let us all help to ensure this.

Better Housing Sought

For the purpose of advancing the missions assigned the Marine Corps by higher authority and by law, the Marine Corps intends to provide and maintain, or to participate in the provision and maintenance of adequate, safe, and suitable housing for Marine Corps personnel, on or near our installations. Such housing provisions shall include those civilian employees whose duties require their presence on the base or station.

By skillful planning and handling of our personnel resources I am certain that considerable additional stability of organizations of all types can be gained by meaningful action of field commanders. Don't wait for a handy-man's book of do-it-yourself programs to be presented to you.

The continued inflation of fitness report markings is a serious matter. So serious is it, that by the increasing lack of differences we have no accurate comparative measure of individual capacity or capability. Effective use of existing instructions and positive action by reviewing authorities will help.

We must continue to increase the efficiency of our Women Marines. This will provide us with the important mobilization-base requirement.

TRAINING

When I consider that in the Marine Corps today we probably have the greatest concentration of combat-wise talent in history, there should be little I need to say on the subject of training. There are, though, a few of my views I wish to make known.

The end purpose of all our training is to place a combat-ready Marine on the battlefield imbued with the will to fight. As a means to this end there exists the continuing requirement to perfect our doctrine of vertical assault. In doing this we must remember to fit our helicopter techniques into those of the still necessary and complementing surface assault forces.

I am convinced that the training of the individual grows increasingly more important as we advance into the modern atomic age. The abilities of our units to mount out or load into any type of transportation quickly and properly must not be slighted. Nevertheless, I would like to be certain that in allotting time and effort to training in these matters, you don't overlook the fact that no battle was ever won by Marines in a boat, amphibian tractor, helicopter, ship or transport aircraft. Battles are won by Marines with their feet on the ground.

Next to the individual, the action of the small unit of which he is a part is the vital factor on the battlefield. We must emphasize our small unit training. Today, more than ever, we must have hard-hitting teams superbly led and efficiently supported.

In future warfare we will need to use, more and more, the best camouflage to be had. It is provided every twenty-four hours by nature. Emphasize night training.

Field training and exercises of all magnitudes are extremely costly. It is mandatory they be planned and executed with a view to accomplishing definite training missions.

Too much emphasis cannot be placed upon the fact that our units, whose function it is to destroy the enemy, will fail miserably if emphasis in training is neglected in other areas, particularly communications, intelligence, and supply. If you are going to command, you must control. This is done by communications. To lack intelligence is to be in the ring blindfolded. And the right items of supply for the combat man must be in the right place at the right time and in the proper amount. All these, or we lose.

Our schools courses must be kept constantly under review. Are they too long? Are they responsive to the times ahead? Some times I fear that perhaps certain of our military schools are more responsive or sensitive to the schedules of dependents' schools than to the requirements of Marines and the Marine Corps. We need to take a good look here.

FISCAL MATTERS

If we are to keep our proper perspective during the budget process, and receive from our field commanders necessary and timely information, they must be kept informed. This we will do.

The general staff status of our comptrollers must continue to be emphasized.

There will never be enough dollars to pay for all things we could use, and do, to insure 100% readiness to execute our mission. Financial planning is a direct challenge to all of us.

In our selection of the areas which must go short of the funding we would like, let us ever be mindful that the Marine Corps is doing business for the people of the United States. They are all stockholders. They deserve a high return on their investment. This high return is generated by wise and careful use of funds which they have invested in their Marine Corps.

The present trend is for less appropriated dollars for maintenance. The replacement value of Marine Corps property, Classes I and II is estimated to be in excess of nine hundred million dollars. Surely it is mandatory that we get a full dollar's worth of upkeep out of every maintenance dollar. This huge public investment must be protected from avoidable deterioration. It is our responsibility.

ORGANIZATION

The proper composition, equipping, and organization of our training base, security, and Fleet Marine forces is something which cannot be permanently determined at a certain point in time. To become static in this important matter is to wake up, too late, to find that we are not responsive to the demands of the years ahead.

We are in a world of changes. Let us try, at least, to keep up with them in matters of proper organization and equipment related to intelligent readiness to execute our missions of today and the future. I have directed priority action toward this end.

Recommendations from field commanders are solicited on a continuing basis. In the formulation of your recommendations, I encourage you to listen to the young, both officer and enlisted. Their minds are not likely to be fixed by the 1930's 40's and 50's; but instead be fired by the technology of the 60's, 70's and 80's.

With the ever decreasing amount of maintenance and operation funds available, you must be constantly vigilant to recommend the elimination of unnecessary functions at our posts and stations. Be alert to recognize organizations which can be eliminated or in which we can reduce the dollar costs by reducing unnecessary operations and training requirements.

UNIFORMS AND EQUIPMENT

Non-combat type uniform changes now being processed will be the last such changes considered for some time unless directed by higher authority. Anything relating to the uniform of the Marine which better meets his needs in combat will be given high priority action.

In general I feel that a clean, neat, well fitted uniform with the Marine Corps emblem is tops. There is no need for gimmicks and gadgets.

With respect to equipment we should emphasize simplicity, ruggedness and ease of maintenance. And in design and gadgetry the characteristics we demand should be a pattern of the necessary rather than the ideal. We shall continue to strive to obtain in a timely manner the best possible combat equipment.

There is one item of equipment about which I have a definite opinion. It is the swagger stick. It shall remain an optional item of interference. If you feel the need of it, carry it.

INSPECTION

Any military organization is only as good as its inspection system. Be sure you have a good one at all levels of command and within staffs.

I am certain we can devise a better way to have an index of the readiness of our Fleet Marine Force units. Commanders must spend more time more often on inspections of the present "Inspector General type." The Inspector General will devote less time to these matters and more on ascertaining whether individuals and units are ready to play their roles in combat.

Station and detachment commanders will be assisted by information on the important areas for inspections, and the important discrepancies that all must seek out and correct.

RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT

The magnitude and importance of the development programs required to effect the doctrine of vertical envelopment and the requirement for dispersion dwarf all past developmental efforts of the Marine Corps in the fields of equipment, organization, tactics and techniques. It is of paramount importance that we have the proper organization, procedures, goals, plans and programs to pursue this task effectively.

INFORMATIONAL SERVICES

Next to perfection in combat readiness I believe mutual good will among the Marine Corps, other armed services and the public to be our most important objective.

I want to make known to you my position with respect to our external and internal Informational Services programs.

I wish to keep the public fully informed of our plans, policies, programs and developments, insofar as security measures permit.

In addition, I desire that our internal Informational Services program insure that all Marines are kept fully informed of our activities, consistent with proper security, and particularly in those matters which directly affect the morale of the individual Marine.

I believe General Lejeune, our 13th Commandant, once said in substance, that if, in all matters in battle and out, you made certain all privates knew what it was you were trying to accomplish, success was assured. General Lejeune was a man of wisdom.

Finally, although Public Relations as such is a command responsibility, it is not enough that the commander alone, assisted by his informational services officer, work at it. It is an "all hands" job. Every commander, every officer, every Marine has a stake in good public and community relations for the Corps and a responsibility to do his share in maintaining such relations.

SPECIAL SERVICES

I believe that we now have the best special services program in the history of the Marine Corps. It is a most economical one.

Only by exercising command responsibility and alertness can our success continue.

Still there seems to be an inconsistency here also. It has been difficult for me to reconcile the fact that we may at some posts and stations spend several thousand dollars on a few men for a big time athletic team, with questionable spectator interest, and at the same station there are few places where a man can write a letter or read without leaving his home-barracks or squad room. He should not have to sit on the edge of his bunk with improper lighting. Let's all take a resounding whack at improving this inadequacy.

MARINE CORPS RESERVE

The readiness of the Marine Corps Reserve is at an all time high. Never before has our dependence upon the reserve been so great and never before has our reserve been more worthy of that dependence. The facilities available to us in which to train our reserve units are more adequate than ever before and improvement continues.

Practically all members of the Reserve have served on active duty or have performed at least six months of active duty training. Attendance at drills and annual field training has never been higher.

We must in the years ahead nurture and maintain these valuable assets to the strength and security of our nation.

STAFF, HEADQUARTERS, U. S. MARINE CORPS

Our staff manual is a good guide for your functions and duties. If there is question or doubt on your part, make an early appointment with me.

Let there be no mistake; this is my staff. I shall lean heavily on my Assistant Commandant, and my Chief of Staff for whom you will directly perform your labors in order that the necessary staff coordination may be effected.

I shall always strive to have a staff that I believe in and strive to let them work without the constant interference which is so distracting to the best of staffs. Either I believe or I believe. I have no reliefs in mind.

As it must be with a staff, I expect you to be honor-bound to set forth your views boldly and without reservation until a decision is made. Thereafter your task is to support that decision with all-out energy and make it work.

I believe it most important in your staff actions that everyone having a legitimate interest in a problem under consideration should be given an opportunity to have his say.

Keep me informed. Don't try to keep bad news away from me.

I don't want staff visits by persons from this Headquarters to be a burden on our field commanders. I expect all field travel by Headquarters staff officers to be so coordinated as to prevent a continuing avalanche of visitors at our posts and stations and Fleet Marine Force units. Further keep routine staff trips to a bare minimum and let one officer take care of many things. He'll be busier and look better at the place he visits. If a field commander receives instructions prepared here and which, after an exchange of letters, he sincerely believes is not practicable because of lack of understanding on the part of my staff, he can request a staff officer visit his command.

I want to make sure that there is well defined staff cognizance over all functions. Decentralize operations to our field commanders, and as much as possible leave them alone to do their jobs. I want to retain policy making here supported by properly administered and effective controls.

I want this Headquarters to operate in a happy, relaxed, busy, efficient atmosphere. I will try to keep you informed and oriented on a timely basis. I want you at all times to know my desires and my viewpoints in problem areas in which you must work.

I plan to be aboard most of the time and I will not be "too busy" to see you.

ENDING

It is good to feel the grips of the plow in my hands. I have every confidence that with both the regular establishment and the reserve forces in direct support, the furrow will be straight and true and the years ahead for the Marine Corps will be ones of progress and accomplishment.

Rivers Proposal For National Guard Benefits Wins Defense Dept Approval

The Rivers bill authorizing medical care and other benefits for National Guardsmen assigned to "additional training or duty with or without pay" has won the backing of the Defense Department.

Introduced last year by Representative L. Mendel Rivers (D-SC), the measure (HR 3356) is designed to clarify the status of National Guardsmen performing such duties, authorized by the Secretary of the Army or Air Force, or instructing at National Guard Schools or attending such a school where all of the instructors are members of the National Guard not in active Federal service.

Guardsmen are entitled to hospital benefits, medical care and compensation for injuries incurred and diseases contracted during authorized training only if that training itself authorized in certain sections of Title 32, U. S. Code. None of the sections contain clear authority for "additional training or other duty, with or without pay," instruction by National Guardsmen at National Guard schools or attendance at such schools.

The Rivers bill makes it clear that the Service Secretaries may authorize such training or duty under specific sections of Title 32, thereby removing any doubt as to whether individuals who incur an injury or contract a disease while performing such training or duties are entitled to medical care, compensation and other benefits.

The Pentagon has advised Congress

Pentagon Backs Top Grade Retirements

The Pentagon has endorsed a plan to permit members of the Armed Forces to retire in the highest rank they have held in any of the Services.

At present, members are entitled only to the permanent rank they hold in the Armed Force from which they retire, or to the highest temporary rank which they have satisfactorily held in that Service.

Legislation to change the rules was introduced last year by Representative William S. Mailliard (R-Calif). The Pentagon has given its support to his bill (HR 2492) but recommends that it be broadened in scope.

The Defense Department said it "believes that a person who has served satisfactorily on active duty in one Armed Force and later becomes a member of another Armed Force should be entitled to the same benefits for physical disability and retirement purposes as a person who remains in the same armed force for his entire service."

In February 1958, the Comptroller General ruled that in determining the highest temporary grade in which an Air Force member had served and was entitled to be retired, service in the Army could be considered only if the higher grade was held in the Army Air Corps or the Army Air Force. As a result of this ruling, some who had been retired in the highest grade they had held in the Army were required to return part of their retired pay.

These "overpayments" would be validated under a recommended Pentagon change in the Mailliard bill.

Retirement in the highest temporary grade would be permitted, under a Bureau of the Budget recommendation, only in cases where the member had served satisfactorily in such grade for a period of not less than six months.

AF Issues Rules For General Standard Of Conduct Relating To Conflict Between Private Interests And Official Duties

(The following is the text of a new official pronouncement by the Air Force concerning standards of conduct relating to conflict between private interests and official duties. Its publication came as the Hebert Subcommittee on Capitol Hill was preparing to release next week hearings it conducted on this subject last summer.)

1. PURPOSE AND SCOPE. To prescribe the standards of conduct relating to conflict between private interests and official duties, required of all military and civilian Air Force personnel, regardless of assignment and to, more specifically, set forth:

a. Prohibitions against certain activities of present and former Air Force personnel, including retired officers, involving a conflict between private interests and official duties; and

b. Rules against acceptance of gratuities by Air Force personnel.

This Regulation also contributes to the purpose described in a above, by insuring that personnel of the Air Force are not knowingly transacting business with persons who are within statutory prohibitions or under circumstances where there may be a possible conflict of interest between Governmental duties and private affairs. It is in consonance with the Code of Ethics for Government Services contained in House Concurrent Resolution 175, 85th Congress, which is applicable to all Air Force personnel. (See attachment.)

2. STATUTORY PROVISIONS:

a. Criminal Statutes Relating to Air Force Personnel. The following activities may subject Air Force personnel to criminal penalty under the statutes cited:

(1) Asking, accepting, or agreeing to receive as a bribe or graft, directly or indirectly, any money, contract, or other thing of value, either (a) with the intent to have any of their official decisions or actions influenced thereby, or (b) for giving or procuring, or aiding to procure for any person, a Government contract (18 USC 202 and the first paragraph of 18 USC 216).

(2) Receiving or agreeing to receive directly or indirectly, compensation for services rendered by themselves or another in relation to any proceeding, contract, or claim before any department or agency where the United States is directly or indirectly interested (18 USC 281).

(3) Acting as agent or attorney in prosecuting any claim against the Government or assisting in the prosecution of any such claim otherwise than in the proper discharge of official duties (18 USC 283).

(4) Transacting business as officers or agents of the United States with any corporation, firm, or partnership in the profits of which they are directly or indirectly interested (18 USC 434).

(5) Receiving from any source other than the Federal or any state, county, or municipal government any compensation in connection with their Government services (18 USC 1914). However, any Reserve ordered to active duty and any person inducted into the armed forces under the Universal Military Training and Service Act, who, before being ordered to active duty or inducted, was receiving compensation from any person may, while serving on active duty, receive compensation from that person (10 USC 1033, and sec. 4(f), Universal Military Training and Service Act, as amended, 50 USC App. 454(f)).

(6) Soliciting, accepting, or offering to accept any commission, payment, or gift in connection with the procurement of equipment, materials, commodities, or services under the Mutual Security Act of 1954 in connection with which procurement such personnel are or were employed or performed duty or took any action during such employment (Sec. 512, Act of August 26, 1954, 22 USC 1764).

b. Statutes Relating Specifically to Former Personnel:

(1) It is unlawful for former personnel, within two years after their incumbency, to prosecute or to act as counsel, attorney, or agent for prosecuting any claim against the United States which involves any subject matter directly connected with which such persons were employed or performed duty (18 USC 284). The Attorney General has construed this statute to mean that every person who has been employed in any Government agency, including commissioned officers assigned to duty in such agency, is disqualified for a period of two years after such employment or service has ceased from representing in any manner or capacity any interest opposed to the United States in any matter with which such person was directly connected during the time he was in Government service. No distinction is to be drawn between monetary claims against the Government and nonmonetary claims, or between affirmative claims and defensive claims. However, the Department of Justice has also advised that the statute was not designed to go beyond specific matters or cases upon which a person worked or concerning which he gained information while employed by the Government. Where a person acquires or expands his professional knowledge in some particular field while with the Government, he is entitled to use such professional knowledge in pursuing his livelihood after he leaves Government service so long as he does not, within the two-year period specified by the statute, employ such knowledge in connection with a SPECIFIC MATTER with which he became DIRECTLY CONNECTED while in Government service.

(2) Section 113 of the Renegotiation Act, as amended, prohibits any person who has been employed in the Department from prosecuting at any time any claim against the United States involving any subject matter directly connected with which such person was so employed (Sec. 113, Act of March 23, 1951, as amended, 50 USC App. 1223). Although this statute does not prescribe any criminal penalties for violation of this provision, it constitutes a Congressional policy that former personnel should not prosecute any such claims at any time.

(3) It is unlawful for former personnel, within two years after the termination of their employment to solicit, accept, or offer to accept any commission, payment, or gift in connection with the procurement of equipment, materials, commodities, or services under the Mutual Security Act of 1954 in connection with which procurement such former personnel were employed or performed duty or took any action during such employment as an officer or employee of the Government (Sec. 512, Act of August 26, 1954, 22 USC 1764).

c. Statutory Provisions Specifically Applying to Retired Regular Officers:

(1) Regular retired officers are "officers of the United States" for the purpose of bringing them within the statutes cited in a above. However, 18 USC 434 relates to representing the Government in transacting business with a private concern, and 18 USC 1914 relates to receiving compensation from a private source in connection with services performed for the Government. Therefore, neither 18 USC 434 nor 18 USC 1914 applies to a Regular retired officer who is not representing or performing services for the United States. In addition, 18 USC 202 and the first paragraph of 18 USC 216 do not apply to Regular retired officers who are not representing or performing services for the United States. 18 USC 281 exempts retired officers not on active duty from its application, but it prohibits a Regular retired Air Force officer from representing any person in the sale of anything to the Government through the Department of the Air Force. 18 USC 283 exempts retired officers not on active duty from its application, but it prohibits a Regular retired Air Force officer from acting as agent or attorney for prosecuting or assisting in the prosecution of any claim against the Government, within two years after his retirement, involving the Department of the Air Force. It also prohibits a Regular retired officer from acting as agent or attorney from prosecuting or assisting in the prosecution of any claim against the Government, at any time, involving any subject matter with which he was directly connected while on active duty.

(2) Section 1309 of the Act of August 7, 1953 (67 Stat. 437; 5 USC 59c) prohibits payment from appropriated funds to any Regular retired officer for a period of two years after his retirement, who for himself or for others is engaged in the selling of or contracting for the sale of or negotiating for the sale of any supplies or war materials to any agency of the Department of Defense, the Coast Guard, the Coast and Geodetic Survey, or the Public Health Service. In 38 Comptroller General 470, the Comptroller General said, among other things, that this statutory prohibition applies to a Regular retired officer whose activities were calculated to induce a nonappropriated fund activity of a military department to purchase supplies from his employer, even though the mechanical act of negotiating or consummating the actual sale was done by some other agent of the retired officer's employer.

d. Reserve and National Guard Officers. A Reserve who is not on active duty, and a Reserve who is on active duty for training, is not considered to be an "officer of the United States" for the purposes of the foregoing statutes solely because of his Reserve status or because of his being on active duty for training. Membership in a Reserve component of the armed forces or in the National Guard does not, in itself, prevent a person from practicing his civilian profession or occupation before, or in connection with, any department (Sects. 29(c) and (d), Act of August 10, 1956, 5 USC 30r(c) and (d)).

e. Other Related Criminal Statutes Applicable to Conflict of Interests. The following activities may subject present and former Air Force personnel to criminal penalties:

(1) Aiding, abetting, counseling, commanding, inducing, or procuring another to commit a crime under the criminal statutes cited above (18 USC 2).

(2) Concealing or failing to report to proper authorities the commission of a crime under any of the criminal statutes cited above, if such personnel know of the actual commission of the crime (18 USC 4).

(3) Conspiring with one or more other persons to commit a crime under any of the criminal statutes cited above, or to defraud the United States, if the person concerned does any act to effect the object of the conspiracy (18 USC 371).

3. CONFLICTS OF INTEREST:

a. General. All Air Force personnel are bound to refrain from any private business or professional activity which would place them in a position where there is a conflict between their private interests and the public interest of the United States and the Air Force. In addition, Air Force personnel will not engage in any private activity which makes possible the improper capitalization of information gained through an Air Force position. Even though a technical conflict of interest, as set forth in the statutes cited in paragraph 2, may not exist, it is desirable to avoid the appearance of such a conflict from a public confidence point of view.

b. Disqualifying Financial Interest. In any case where Air Force personnel have any financial interest in any business entity, or have arranged or are negotiating for their subsequent employment by such entity, they are disqualified from representing the Air Force in dealings of any kind with such entity. Personnel charged with the administration of AFR 34-21, who own stock in or are officers of an insurance company, must scrupulously avoid negotiating with such company in respect to granting authorization to solicit sales. The same restriction will apply in the case of personnel having a financial interest in any other business enterprise which deals with Air Force personnel on an individual basis.

c. Disqualification Procedure. In any case where, in accordance with b above, Air Force personnel believe that they should be disqualified from taking action in a particular matter, they will so inform an appropriate superior and will thereupon be relieved of their duty and responsibility in that particular case. In addition, where a superior thinks any personnel responsible to him may have a disqualifying interest, he will discuss the matter with such personnel and, if he finds such an interest does exist, he will relieve the personnel of duty and responsibility in the particular case. In cases

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of the Treasury—Robert B. Anderson
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

PRESIDENT Eisenhower has asked Congress to give the Commandant of the Coast Guard four-star rank and to increase USCG authorized officer strength from 3,000 to 3,500.

The proposal, immediately introduced in the House (HR 9449) by Chairman Herbert C. Bonner (D-NC) of the Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries, also calls for three-star rank for the Assistant Commandant.

Under terms of the bill both the Commandant and the Assistant Commandant will be able to retire voluntarily with pay based on their four and three-star rank after completion of two and one-half years of service. The present requirement is that full retirement pay can not be earned until completion of three year's service.

If the Commandant is not reappointed after completion of a four-year term he will be retired with the grade and retired pay of admiral.

Another proposed change to existing legislation provides that an officer serving as Commandant or Assistant Commandant will be retired in his permanent lower rank if he elects to end his career prior to completing two and one-half year's service.

The Bill also provides that the post of Commandant be the only statutory billet. At present, the billets of Commandant, Assistant Commandant and Engineer-in-Chief are Presidential appointments. Under terms of the Administration proposed, appointments to the posts of Assistant Commandant and Engineer-in-Chief will be made from the list of active duty officers holding the permanent rank of captain or above upon the recommendation of the Commandant.

The recommendation for an increase of authorized strength is made in light of increased Coast Guard responsibilities in such areas as merchant marine safety, pleasure boating and maintenance of loran stations.

An amendment to Section 365 of Title 14 would permit an enlisted man to voluntarily extend his enlistment, upon completion of his first tour of duty, for periods of one to six years. The present law permits extensions of from one to four years.

INDUSTRY IN DEFENSE

Bill Will Seek Loans To Buy Cargo As Military Reserve; Modern MATS Need

Declaring that it is inexcusable that the United States "let itself continue in a defense posture which makes it incapable of responding to anything but all-out thermonuclear war," Senator A. S. Mike Monroney (D-Oklahoma) introduced a bill this week to facilitate the purchase of modern cargo aircraft by certificated air-lines.

Under the Senator's plan the Civil Aeronautics Board would guarantee loans up to 75 per cent of the purchase price to permit the airlines to buy cargo aircraft. The Secretary of Defense would have to certify that aircraft purchased with such loans had "design and performance characteristics which satisfy the criteria of suitability for military use." The planes must continue to be available to meet military requirements in time of war or national emergency.

"I respectfully suggest to the Senate," Senator Monroney said, "that the indispensable element in preparedness for limited war situations is mobility and that in the decade of the sixties, military mobility means military airlift."

"I am convinced that a substantial part of such airlift must be provided in a strategic fleet of military aircraft. I am equally convinced that a substantial part

Lockheed Creates New Aerospace Department

A new Aerospace Technology Department has been established at Lockheed Aircraft Corporation's Georgia Division at Marietta, Hypersonic ramjet aircraft, boost-glide missiles, orbital vehicles, and reentry devices are examples of systems which will be studied.

R. B. Ormsby of Atlanta will be Manager under the Operations Research Division, headed by R. D. Roche. J. B. Hippler is Acting Manager while Mr. Ormsby is on leave at Stanford University, Calif.

Lockheed has disclosed receipt of a quarter-million dollar aerospace study contract from the USAF Wright Air Development Center, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. Lockheed's Human Factors Research Laboratory will continue studies of aerospace crew performance under a variety of work-and-rest schedules. The studies will be made for the Aerospace Medical Laboratory. Dr. Oscar Adams, Lockheed psychologist, will be in charge.

Billy Mitchell Award Goes To AC Engineer

Robert G. Brown, an AC Spark Plug engineer who is pioneer in the field of inertial guidance, has been named the winner of the 1960 Billy Mitchell Award by the Milwaukee chapter of the Air Force Association.

The award is offered to the person who, in the opinion of the Billy Mitchell Squadron, has contributed the most to the Air Force in the past year. Mr. Brown, a Navy veteran and Assistant Director of Navigation and Guidance for AC Spark Plug, the Electronics Division of General Motors, will be honored at the Squadron's annual dinner 23 January at the Cudworth Legion Hall, 1756 N. Prospect Ave., Milwaukee.

Mr. Brown, his wife and eight children live at 13450 Brook Ave., Elm Grove, Wisc.

Motorola Names Lincicome

James R. Lincicome has been appointed to the newly created position of Manager of Program Planning for Motorola's Chicago Military Electronics Center, Roy H. Olson, General Manager, has announced. Mr. Lincicome had been Marketing Representative for the Motorola Military Electronics Division of which the Chicago Military Electronics Center is a part.

must be provided by a strategic reserve fleet of aircraft bought and used in peace-time by commercial carriers, but whose usefulness and availability to the Military Establishment in time of emergency is assured.

"I believe that there is no greater contribution toward an adequate defense which can be taken at this session of Congress than the passage of this legislation."

The Senator, who is chairman of the Aviation Subcommittee of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee, also expressed a hope that "during this session the Congress will receive from the Department of Defense recommendations for a comprehensive modernization and reequipment of MATS strategic transport fleet."

Solar Subsidiary Works On AF Missile Project

A compact electronic automatic switching device that will speed information from missiles and satellites to ground installations has been developed by Electronic Systems Development Corp., a subsidiary of Solar Aircraft Company.

The Air Force awarded a contract for evaluation of the electronic static commutator, Dr. Otto G. Schwede, ESD President, has announced.

The miniaturized switching device, which consists entirely of compact electronic circuits and has no moving parts, is capable of operating more than 500 times faster than the less reliable mechanical switches it will replace, Dr. Schwede said.

For space exploration the static commutator will consecutively open and close 60 different channels between sensing devices in a missile and the missile's radio transmitter. Signals from these sensing devices, measuring such items as pressure, temperature and radioactivity, are sent in sequence through the transmitter and back to a control station on the ground where the data is recorded for study.

Hamilton Standard Builds Boeing B-52 Air Conditioner

Air conditioning packages for the Boeing B-52H, North American Hound Dog missile carrying version of SAC's intercontinental bomber, will be designed and produced by Hamilton Standard, division of United Aircraft Corporation, Conn.

An electronic anti-ice control system will be developed and produced by the company's electronics department at Broad Brook, Conn.

The air conditioning units, approximately 2½ feet square, will be one of the largest air cycle packages ever developed by Hamilton Standard. During normal operation, the unit will deliver 130 pounds of cool air per minute to the crew stations. In terms of refrigeration, this could, hypothetically, freeze a million ice cubes a day.

Collins Radio Builds Signal Corps System

Collins Radio Company has received a $1 million contract from the Army Signal Corps for a microwave and a tropospheric scatter communication system to be installed in the Washington, D. C. area.

The microwave system will provide terminal-to-terminal communication between a transmitter site at Woodbridge, Va., and a receiver at LaPlata, Md., a distance of 16.8 miles.

The scatter circuit will connect the LaPlata receiver site to the Communications Center at Fort Detrick, Md., a distance of 68 miles.

Northrop Names Astro Systems Scientist

D. Donald F. Mitchell, a former Naval officer, has been appointed as a bio-astronautics scientist in the Astro Systems and Research Laboratories of Northrop Corporation's Norair Division at Hawthorne, Calif. George F. Douglas, Norair Vice President of Engineering, said Dr. Mitchell, who has done extensive research work in genetics, biological effects of radiation, meteorology and botany, will participate in an experimental research program on systems to support human life in outer space.

The research program, conducted by the Astro Lab's Bio-astronautics Laboratory, is probing open and closed ecological systems, human factors, space radiation phenomena and astro-biology.

Dr. Mitchell received a bachelor's degree in physics and meteorology in 1946, a bachelor's degree in zoology in 1948 and a doctorate in genetics in 1952, all from UCLA. He was commissioned an ensign in the Naval Reserve in 1946 under the V-12 program and participated in Operation Crossroads, the first Pacific atomic bomb tests. He was recalled to active duty in 1952 and served for two years as an aeronautical officer.

He resides at 1245 Crestview Drive, Seal Beach, Calif., with his wife and four children.

North American Division Develops Atomic Gauge

A NEW fuel gauge, which utilizes sources of atomic energy in measuring the amount of fuel in aircraft and missiles, has been developed for the Navy.

The gauge was developed by Atomics International, division of North American Aviation, Inc. Tests have been conducted by North American's Autonetics Division, and additional tests are scheduled by the Navy.

Described by the Pentagon as "capable of measuring amounts of fuel with greater accuracy and reliability than conventional devices," the light-weight, transistorized gauge has been environmentally tested at altitudes to 38,000 feet, and has performed accurately during all flight attitudes. It was installed in a twin-engine jet bomber during a series of performance tests.

All types of solid and liquid propellants can be measured by the gauge. Its performance is not affected by impurities in the fuel. It is easily installed, and automatically accounts for differences in hydro-carbon, or petroleum-based fuels which affect the accuracy of conventional devices.

The atomic materials used in the gauge are those which are sources of gamma radiation, such as Cobalt-60. These radiation sources are mounted on the sides of each fuel tank, along with detectors. Gamma rays given off by the radioactive materials pass through the fuel supply, decreasing in intensity as they do so. The amount of fuel is determined by the intensity of the gamma rays reaching the detectors. A ratemeter converts pulses picked up by the detectors into DC voltage and the quantity of fuel is recorded in pounds by an indicator.

Bell Iroquois Gets Canadian Ice Test

DEICING tests are being conducted in Canada by Bell Helicopter Corporation as part of a program to make its jet-type U. S. Army Iroquois helicopter an all-weather aircraft.

Two deicing systems developed by Bell will be tested in the Canadian National Research Laboratory's artificial spray tower in Ottawa. One is believed to be the free world's first liquid system, designed to serve both as an anti-icer and a deicer. Russia has developed such a system. The other is an electro-thermal system which deices with electrically-created heat.

The helicopter being used for tests in the Canadian spray tower is a Model XH-40, experimental version of the Iroquois, now known as the HU-1 Series. The same ship formerly underwent rigorous heat and sandstorm tests on the Arizona desert, earning it the name of "Desert Lil."

The spray tower tests will run until 15 March. Then a team of Bell experts observing the tests will recommend which system is preferable for the turbine-powered helicopter.

Martin Lacrosse Will Face Cold Weather

The Army will conduct a series of cold weather trials of the Martin Lacrosse missile armed with conventional weapons at Fort Churchill, Manitoba, during January and February to demonstrate field operations under Arctic conditions.

The Lacrosse, a surface-to-surface field missile system, is capable of carrying a conventional or nuclear warhead, was developed under direction of the Army Rocket and Guided Missile Agency, Army Ordnance Missile Command, Redstone Arsenal, Ala., and is built by Martin Orlando, Fla.

Former Navy-AF Writer Joins Hercules Powder Staff

Richard B. Douglas has joined the public relations staff of Hercules Powder Company's Advertising Department at Wilmington, Del., it is announced by M. R. Budd, Director of the Advertising Department.

Mr. Douglas came to Hercules from the Navy Department, where he was Assistant Technical Information officer for the Bureau of Ordnance. Prior to that he was associated with the Department of the Air Force as a technical writer.

Text Of Air Force Official Rules On "Conflict Of Interests" For Active And Retired

of disqualification under this paragraph, the matter will be assigned for decision and action to someone else of equal or higher rank who clearly has no conflict of interest.

4. DEALING WITH FORMER MILITARY AND CIVILIAN PERSONNEL. Air Force personnel will not knowingly deal with military or civilian personnel, or former military or civilian personnel, of the Government or such action would result in a violation of a statute or policy set forth in this regulation. For example, Air Force personnel will not at any time knowingly deal with retired officers or with former personnel where such personnel are representing any person in the prosecution of any claim against the United States involving any subject matter with which such personnel were directly connected while with the Air Force.

5. RETIRED REGULAR OFFICERS:

a. Prosecution of Claims. Under the statutes cited above, a retired regular Air Force officer may not, within two years of his retirement, act as an agent or attorney for prosecuting any claim against the Government, or assist in the prosecution of such a claim or receive any gratuity or any share of or interest in such claim in consideration for having assisted in the prosecution of such a claim, if such claim involves the Air Force. Nor may a retired officer at any time act as an agent or attorney for prosecuting any claim against the Government or assist in prosecution of such claim, or receive any gratuity or any share of or interest in such a claim in consideration for having assisted in the prosecution of such claim, if such claim involves any subject matter with which he was directly connected while on active duty.

b. Selling or Contracting for Sale. Under the statutes cited above, no retired regular Air Force officer will sell, contract for the sale of, or negotiate for the sale of anything to the Air Force. This prohibition extends beyond the mere bargaining which may precede the execution or the modification of a contract. It includes any activity in a representative capacity on behalf of the prospective contractor which is directed toward forming the basis of a contract with the Government. This regulation should not be construed as prohibiting activities which are only remotely connected with contractual matters. It is not the intent of this regulation to preclude a retired officer from accepting employment with private industry solely because his employer is a contractor with the Government.

6. RESERVE AND NATIONAL GUARD PERSONNEL:

a. Members of the Reserve components of the armed forces who are on active duty, other than for training, are "officers" or "employees" of the United States for the purpose of bringing them within the statutes cited in paragraph 2a. When members are released from active duty, they become former personnel for the purpose of bringing them within paragraph 2b.

b. Members of the Reserve components, whether in the Ready, Standby, or Retired Reserve, who are not on active duty are not, solely because of their status as Reserves, considered to be officers of the United States for the purpose of bringing them within the statutes cited in paragraphs 2a and 2b. Paragraph 2c does not apply to retired Reserves.

c. Receipt of retired pay by Reserves or former Reserves does not, in itself, make such personnel officers or employees, or former officers or employees, of the United States for the purpose of bringing them within the statutes cited in paragraphs 2a and 2b, solely because they are on active duty for training. While they are on active duty for training, however, Reserves are subject to the policies prescribed in this regulation. Air Force personnel who are responsible for assigning Reserves for training should make an effort to assign them when they are on active duty for training to duties in which they will not obtain information that could be used by them or their employers so as to give them an unfair advantage over their civilian competitors.

7. AFFIDAVITS:

a. Obtaining Affidavits. All retired Air Force officers, and former personnel within two years after leaving the Air Force, seeking to do business with the Air Force are required to file an affidavit stating:

(1) Their former connection with the Air Force and the date of termination thereof;

(2) The subject matter of the business they are transacting and intend to transact with Air Force personnel, and whether their duties in their former connection with the Air Force related to the same subject matter;

(3) Whether they gave any personal attention to the matters under consideration or gained any personal knowledge of the facts thereof while connected with the Government.

b. Filing Affidavit. All affidavits prepared on AFPI Form 34 will be sent directly to the Commander, Air Materiel Command, ATTN: MCPI, for processing. If, from the statements in such affidavit and from such other information as the Air Force may have in its possession, it appears that a violation of the policy or statutes as set forth in this regulation is not involved, the affiant will be given a statement to that effect. Where a clear violation of the policy or statutes as set forth in this regulation is involved, the affiant will be so advised. In those instances where the Commander, Air Materiel Command, is unable to resolve the issues, the matter will be submitted to Headquarters USAF for referral to the Office of the Secretary of the Air Force for consideration and decision.

8. GRATUITIES. Air Force personnel will not accept any favor or gratuity, directly or indirectly, from any person, firm, corporation, or other entity which has engaged in, is engaged in, or is endeavoring to engage in, procurement activities or business transactions of any sort with the Air Force, where such favor or gratuity might influence, or might reasonably be interpreted as influencing, the impartiality of such personnel.

9. PROHIBITION OF CONTRIBUTIONS OR PRESENTS TO SUPERIORS. No officer, clerk, employee in the United States Government employ shall at any time solicit contributions from other officers, clerks, or employees in the Government service for a gift or present to those in a superior official position; nor shall any such officials or clerical superiors receive any gift or present offered or presented to them as a contribution from persons in Government employ receiving a less salary than themselves; nor shall any officer or clerk make any donation as a gift or present to any official superior. Every person who violates this section shall be summarily discharged from the Government employ (R.S. 1784; 5 USC 113; see AFbul 9, 1953).

10. USE OF MILITARY TITLES IN CONNECTION WITH COMMERCIAL ENTERPRISES:

a. All military personnel on active duty, officer and enlisted, are prohibited from using their military or position titles in connection with any commercial enterprise. For the purpose of this regulation the term "commercial enterprise" includes any organization other than a nonprofit or charitable organization which is exempt from Federal income taxation because it comes within subsection (1), (3), (4), (6), (7), (8), (9), (10), (11), (13), or (14) of section 501 (c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1954, as amended (26 USC 501). No member on extended active duty will use his military title or position title in connection with any organization unless he first determines from the organization involved that it is exempt from taxation under one of the above subsections of the Internal Revenue Code. Any member who desires to request an exception to the foregoing limitation will address his request through channels to the Secretary of the Air Force, setting forth detailed information concerning the organization involved.

b. Authorship of any material for publication is exempt from the limitation in a above, subject to existing regulations.

c. Retired personnel of both the Regular and Reserve components, officer and enlisted, who are not on active duty may use their military titles in connection with commercial enterprises.

d. Reserve component personnel, officer and enlisted, who are not on active duty may use their military titles in connection with commercial enterprises.

e. Reserve and retired members and former members who are not on active duty will not use their military titles in overseas areas in connection with public appearances without obtaining the prior approval of the theater commander.

f. When a Reserve or retired member or former member uses his military title in accordance with c through e above, his title must show that he is a Reserve or is in a retired status, or both, as applicable.

11. CIVIL EMPLOYMENT OF MILITARY PERSONNEL:

a. No commissioned officer of the Regular Air Force may be:

(1) Employed on civil works or internal improvements;

(2) Allowed to be employed by an incorporated company; or

(3) Employed as acting paymaster or disbursing agent of the Bureau of Indian Affairs;

If that employment requires him to be separated from his unit or organization, or interferes with the performance of his military duties (10 USC 8544).

b. No enlisted member of the Air Force on active duty may be ordered or permitted to leave his post to engage in a civilian pursuit or business, or a performance in civil life, for emolument, hire, or otherwise, if the pursuit, business, or performance interferes with the customary or regular employment of local civilians in their art, trade, or profession (10 USC 8635).

c. Military personnel on active duty will not represent any insurance company in the solicitation of commercial life insurance on a military installation.

12. REPORTING SUSPECTED VIOLATIONS:

Any person who has information which causes him to suspect that there has been a violation of a policy or statute set forth in this regulation will promptly report it to the appropriate commander in accordance with the procedures prescribed in AFR 124-8. The commander will promptly refer the matter for investigation to the nearest Office of Special Investigations District Office if he receives a report indicating a possible violation. Any question or doubt on the part of the commander will be resolved in favor of referring the matter to the Office of Special Investigations.

HOUSE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 175 85TH CONGRESS, 2D SESSION

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress that the following Code of Ethics should be adhered to by all Government employees, including officeholders:

CODE OF ETHICS FOR GOVERNMENT SERVICE

Any person in Government service should:

1. Put loyalty to the highest moral principles and to country above loyalty, to persons, party, or Government department.

2. Uphold the Constitution, laws, and legal regulations of the United States and of all governments therein and never be a party to their evasion.

3. Give a full day's labor for a full day's pay; giving to the performance of his duties his earnest effort and best thought.

4. Seek to find and employ more efficient and economical ways of getting tasks accomplished.

5. Never discriminate unfairly by the dispensing of special favors or privileges to anyone, whether for remuneration or not; and never accept, for himself or his family, favors or benefits under circumstances which might be construed by reasonable persons as influencing the performance of his governmental duties.

6. Make no private promises of any kind binding upon the duties of office, since a Government employee has no private word which can be binding on public duty.

7. Engage in no business with the Government, either directly or indirectly, which is inconsistent with the conscientious performance of his governmental duties.

8. Never use any information coming to him confidentially in the performance of governmental duties as a means for making private profit.

9. Expose corruption wherever discovered.

10. Uphold these principles, ever conscious that public office is a public trust.

or six Honest John weapons of the Army with its serving crews from here to Formosa in about four hours."

General White said the B-70 also has potential as a space-launching vehicle.

"I think the scientists are a little less certain of this than I am in my general ignorance," he added, "but the fact is that we don't know just where an airplane that would have the capability to take a second-stage rocket to 70,000 feet at Mach 3—what is the implication of that to space weapons.

"I should say—and I think scientists will agree to that—it could have a very great implication."

General White said that the B-70, equipped with "an enormous radar dish," could also carry out a mission as a long-range interceptor, armed with many long-range air-to-air rockets.

"I think the idea of a single, all-purpose weapon is one that could be exploited," General White declared, "and some day I hope it will be."

THE JOURNAL SPEAKS WITH ONE VOICE!

As the Nation's only weekly military publication covering the total Defense Establishment, THE ARMY NAVY AIR FORCE JOURNAL speaks with one voice.

News and editorial coverage are aimed at one objective: strengthening National Defense.

THE JOURNAL rejects the practice followed by some publications in taking one slant on a particular problem in one issue and taking an opposite slant in another issue of the same date.

THE JOURNAL approach is to provide our readers with a single authoritative report . . . to call the shots with one voice.

In our first issue almost 97 years ago, it was put this way: THE JOURNAL "will be controlled by no clique: Its independence will be absolute."

Air Force Will Remove 2107 Rated Officers From Flying Status Among 3399 Surveyed By Board; 363 Are Command Pilots

The Air Force has recommended removal from flying status of 2107 officers, including 363 command pilots, from 3399 in the ranks of lieutenant through colonel who were screened by the 1959 board.

The 2107 total exceeds by far the total number that have been taken off flying status since annual screenings began in 1954. Last year's total was 390 from 507 reviewed. The previous high year was in 1957, when 1888 were considered and 1125 suspended. There were only 18 suspensions in 1954; 32 in 1955, and 68 in 1956.

The 1959 board, whose results have just been released, suspended 81 colonels, 358 lieutenant colonels, 822 majors, 832 captains and 14 lieutenants.

Some of the major factors considered were age, rated qualifications, nonrated qualifications, retainability, training investments, attitude and effectiveness, and flying career interruption.

Suspended were 1843 pilots, 226 navigators, and 38 aircraft observers.

Among the pilots, 943 are Regulars. The navigator suspensions will affect 134 Regulars and 92 Reserve officers, while 18

Regular and 20 Reserve aircraft observers will be suspended from flying status.

Among the pilots, 68 are colonels, 29 lieutenant colonels, 739 majors, 734 captains and 7 lieutenants.

The navigator breakdown: 13 colonels, 58 lieutenant colonels, 69 majors, 81 captains, and 5 lieutenants.

The aircraft observers include 5 lieutenant colonels, 14 majors, 17 captains and 2 lieutenants.

This was the first year that command pilots have been considered by a flight status selection board on a mandatory basis. In addition to the 363 command pilots, 1,360 senior pilots and 125 pilots were recommended for suspension.

QUARRY ISLAND PANAMA CANA

AFTER a five-year period of reductions, marked by a 50% cut in strength, U. S. military forces in the Panama Canal Zone now face a substantial buildup.

Interviewed by THE JOURNAL at the Caribbean Command headquarters of Lt. Gen. Ridgely G. Gathen, USA, Brig. Gen. James W. Coutts, USA, CofS, said:

"In view of the tensions in the Caribbean area, and if we continue in our unhappy relations with Panama, the only thing I can see is that the strength of U. S. forces here will go up."

"It is unfortunate that the Panama situation should now be disturbed," General Coutts added, "because we have had very fine relations with Panama for a long, long time in the past."

The build up of U. S. military strength in the Zone, General Coutts related, primarily would be in Army forces.

The U. S. Army Caribbean, with headquarters at Ft. Amador, C. Z., is under command of Maj. Gen. Charles L. Dasher, due to retire this year.

Navy element of the command, the Fifteenth Naval District at Amador, under RAdm. Lewis S. Parks, may also receive increased strength as a result of proposed changes in the Mutual Assistance Program for South America (story, page 17). The MAP changes would give the 15th Naval District more responsibility for South American military assistance planning.

Air Force component of the Caribbean Command is the Caribbean Air Command, located at Albrook AFB, C. Z. This is commanded by Maj. Gen. Leland S. Stranahan.

The day of the mobile missile base is close at hand. Four of the Navy's nuclear-powered, ballistic-missile subs have already been launched. The missile they'll carry—the Lockheed-built Polaris—is undergoing its final tests. This year, America will have a deterrent weapon that is safe from surprise.
